Military Pact Not U.S. Aim, Berle Says at Lima Parley

Argentina Proposes Joint Conference on Defense; Cuba Hits Nazi Persecutions

By the Associated Press.

Lima, Dec. 9.—The eighth Pan-American Conference opened tonight with a declaration by its head, President Oscar Benavides of Peru, that the Western Hemisphere "wishes to be strong in order to be respected."

Benavides' assertion before the conference came as Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant United States Secretary of State, told a radio audience that the United States was not seeking any military alliance with Latin-American nations.

"It is said by some that military alliances will be sought," said Berle, a member of his government's delegation to the conference. "Of course, this is only a rumor and is obviously out of the question."

Defense Pact Proposed

The possibility appeared, however, that a frank Pan-American declaration in favor of mutual assistance in case of foreign aggression in this hemisphere would be made.

The first concrete proposal for increased inter-American co-operation was submitted by the Argentine delegation. The Argentine plan would call for mutual consultation of American countries through regular meetings of their foreign ministers or representatives through perhaps less frequently than yearly.

[The issue of persecution of Jews in Germany was injected when the conference was asked to denounce attacks on racial and religious groups, the United Press reported.

Persecutions Condemned

[The Cuban delegation, headed by Secretary of State Juan J. Remos, made public a resolution condemning persecutions of a "collective character" because of racial or religious motives which result in depriving the victims of the right to live "honorably."

[Although the resolution did not name Germany directly, the inference was unmistakable.

[The way was cleared also for world-wide support of the resolution in an invitation to "all countries not represented at the eighth Pan American Conference to uphold these principles of civilization and co-operation."—Editor's note.]

Benavides, dynamic Peruvian chief executive, told the gathering of statesmen from North, Central and South America that "there is not and there can not be continental imperialism, neither in economic, nor in spiritual, nor in political spheres of the Americas."

He appealed to the conference to make a new effort toward closer bonds and "for the preservation of the system of international pacts

Gaston B. Means Near Death in Prison Hospital

Gaston B. Means, one-time special Government investigator, who is now serving a 15-year term for swindling Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Washington society leader, of $104,000 in her efforts to help solve the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, was critically ill last night at the United States medical center for Federal prisoners at Springfield, Mo., after a heart attack, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

The nationally known former detective underwent an operation Tuesday for the removal of his gall bladder.

Warden M. R. King said Means "propably will not live through the night."

U. S. Ready to Fight Spies, Roosevelt Says

America Long Has Laughed at 'Plots' Of Foreign Agents

By Edward T. Folliard

The United States is the only great power that does not maintain a central force of spy hunters. Germany has its Gestapo, Russia its OGPU France its Deuxieme Bureau and Great Britain its famed Secret Service. All of these agencies are highly respected by spies, particularly the Gestapo and the Ogpu, which, to the unwary, spell the neadsman's ax or a bullet at the base of the brain.

In the United States, which long insisted on laughing at "spy plots," the business of catching spies is spread among a half-dozen or more Governmental agencies, and with most of them it is merely an incidental duty.

With only two is it a paramount task, and these two are in the services—G-2, or Intelligence Section of the Army General Staff, and the Office of Naval Intelligence.

G-Men Principal Agency

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, is the principal civilian agency detailed to spy work. Its G-men are assigned to co-operate with the Army and Navy intelligence officers.

Other civilian agencies which figure in the spy-hunting picture are the State Department, the Treasury's Secret Service, the Postal Inspection Service, and the Customs Service.

Theoretically all these agencies work in co-operation. Actually, however, there is not nearly as much co-operation as many high-placed officials would like to see. Sometimes this is because of tradi-

Counter-Espionage System Devised; All Agencies Co-operate

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt yesterday announced he has arranged for co-ordination of the Government's various intelligence agencies to combat activities of foreign spies here, and will request additional money from Congress for the work.

The President purposely withheld all information on the nature of the new national intelligence system, remarking good-naturedly it was obvious that 90 per cent of the value of the new set-up would be destroyed if the spies could read the details in newspapers.

The announcement came at his press conference, when he was asked about the White House visit yesterday of Lamar Hardy, Federal district attorney for Manhattan, who obtained four spy convictions in New York City recently.

Warns Spy Roots Go Deep

The President stressed that the United States needs no German Gestapo or OGPU (Russian secret police) to watch the people of this country, but added that we do need to watch the secret police of other nations operating within American borders.

He warned that the roots of the foreign espionage go down deep.

The program, it was understood, will be keyed into the new national defense program, the full extent of which has not yet been determined.

The Army and Navy have both advised against creation of a new counter-espionage agency, confined exclusively to work against spies.

Policeman Shot By Companion In Halting Row

Brother-Officer's Gun Accidentally Fired In Pursuing 2 Men

Leonard Millman, 27, a patrolman attached to the Third Precinct, was shot critically by a brother policeman last night in his wife's presence. Both men were off duty and both were attempting to halt a fight in front of a beer tavern on Pennsylvania avenue between Sixth and Seventh streets southeast.

From Providence Hospital a call was broadcast for blood donors for Millman, shot in the abdomen.

Patrolman Walter D. Ward, of the Fifth Precinct, who accidentally shot Millman, was severely beaten by two men whom he discovered fighting and attempted to halt.

According to Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, Millman, in civilian clothes, was on his way to his home at 2406 L'Enfant place southeast with his wife, Mrs. Lillian Millman, when he reached the tavern. Just as he got there, Ward was pursuing the two men who had attacked him. Ward fired his revolver twice in the air.

Millman tripped the man who seemed to be the aggressor and grappled with him on the sidewalk. Ward's gun went off once, the slug striking Millman in the stomach.

"Though Millman has been on the police force only little more than a year," said Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, "he has showed he has the makings of a real officer. Off duty, and with his wife, he risked his life to enforce the law."

LaGuardia Rally Assails Persecution

Wallace, Sen. Green, Mgr. Sheen and Dodd Among Those Present

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Dec. 9.—A strenuous protest against oppression of religious, racial and political minorities throughout the world was sounded last night by speakers prominent in the cultural life of the United States, at a citizens' rally called by Mayor LaGuardia at Carnegie Hall.

Unusual precautions were taken to safeguard LaGuardia, who yesterday received a letter containing a .32-caliber cartridge with a threat upon his life if he did not cease attacking naziism. The letter was signed with a swastika. He was guarded by 125 uniformed policemen, and 50 plainclothesmen were in the auditorium.

Among those who denounced Reichsfuhrer Hitler's measures against Jews, as well as other European dictators, including Premier Mussolini of Italy and Stalin of Russia, were Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Senator Green, of Rhode Island; William E. Dodd, former ambassador to Germany; Victor F. Ridder, publisher of the New York Staats-Zeitung und Herold, a German-language newspaper; the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of fundamental theology at the Catholic University, Washington, and Gertrude Atherton, author.

Mgr. Sheen, stressed three points of protest against what is happening today in Europe and warned against misinterpreting the effects of what was going on.

Father, Long Ill, Needs $100 To Pay Debts and Get to Work

It wasn't easy for Mr. X to ask for help. And that which makes his case particularly deserving is that he exhausted every other source before applying for outside assistance.

Finally, when the going became so difficult that there seemed no other way out, he went to the social service agency now handling his case and told his story.

Investigation verified the story told by Mr. X and revealed other facts in the case.

Before asking for outside assistance, Mr. X, in the course of a long illness, first used up all of the family's small savings, savings carefully put aside for just such an emergency. But the demands of the emergency proved more than the small savings could meet.

Because of his excellent work record, the credit of Mr. X was good and, before seeking agency

Daladier's Victory

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 10 (Saturday) (AP).—The Chamber of Deputies today voted confidence in Premier Daladier by 315 to 241, approving his decree laws and strike-smashing methods.

The vote came after an uproarious session in which the premier had sought parliamentary support for a stiff stand against Italian colonial expansion at French expense.

By the vote the premier obtained the chamber's approval of his methods of governing France, which many of his enemies had called dictatorial.

Depends on Rightists

Whether Rightists, on whom he relied for support in the early morning vote, would back the premier when he asks for decree powers to continue his "strong man" government remained a political question in the chamber.

There was little doubt, however, that Daladier had gone far in this first vote, in which Socialists and Communists stood solidly against him.

In his plea for support Daladier had declared that "the integrity of France depends first on the French" and added that only through strength could France protect her territory. His words were a warning that the nation had to be strong at home to defend her colonial empire successfully.

Herriot Walks Out

Twice during the debate Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber, put on his hat ceremoniously and stalked out, thereby suspending the session.

Frequently, while Herriot furiously rang his bell and banged the rostrum for order, Leftist and Rightist deputies stood before him screaming insults at each other.

At one point, the chamber forgot political differences for a moment to howl in delighted laughter at a comment by Leftist Deputy Xavier Vallat on Italy's ambitions at France's expense.

"Just because Italy is shaped like a boot," he said, "it does not mean

Elkton's Wedding Bells Silent as Cupid Ban Falls

By the Associated Press.

Marriage licenses could not be obtained anywhere in Maryland yesterday.

And at Elkton, the Nation's foremost Gretna Green, not a marriage ceremony was performed.

The law providing a delay of 48 hours between issuance of an application for a license and issuance of the marriage permit went into effect one minute after midnight—and as a result only seven applications were issued at Elkton yesterday. Forty-one licenses were issued Thursday.

Six other couples, disappointed at their failure, said they would try Alexandria, Va. One young woman arrived by train from New York City, filed an application and told the clerk she would return for the license "during the week-end."

Mrs. Abell Given 10 Years; Judge Sorry It's Not More

By a Special Correspondent.

Prince Frederick, Md., Dec. 9.—Deliberating only 40 minutes, a jury of farmers last night returned a verdict of manslaughter for Mrs. Margaret Abell, 18-year-old mother, charged with participating last July in the robbery-murder of William Warren Gantt, wealthy middle-aged Port Republic farmer.

Judge William Loker, sitting with two other jurists in Calvert County Circuit Court, sentenced the girl to 10 years in Maryland State Penitentiary. As he gave her the maximum sentence under the verdict, Judge Loker declared:

Crop Control Faces Test in Poll Today

Tobacco, Cotton, Rice Farmers Will Vote On Administration's Penalty Tax Program

By the Associated Press.

The New Deal's crop control law faces a severe test today when the Nation's producers of cotton, rice and flue-cured tobacco ballot on proposals of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration that it be given authority to control sales of these crops in 1939.

The results of the voting may strongly influence the new Congress in its attitude toward the legislation and the farm problem.

Voting booths have been established in thousands of communities in 19 Southern and Far Western States and one territory, so that upwards of 2,500,000 farmers will have an opportunity to vote "yes" or "no" on this question:

"Do you favor marketing quotas on cotton (or rice or flue-cured tobacco) in 1939?"

Two-Thirds Vote Needed

In the case of each crop, if two-thirds or more of the growers voting cast affirmative ballots, the AAA will invoke marketing quota provisions of the farm law to tell each farmer how much he may sell. Sales in excess of quotas would be subject to penalty taxes of 3 cents a pound on cotton, 25 cents a hundred pounds pounds on rice and half the market price on tobacco.

The voting comes about a month after the November elections in which the New Deal suffered losses in the Midwestern corn and wheat belts. Many politicians have attributed these losses in part to farmer dissatisfaction with prices and the crop control law.

Campaign Vigorous

Farm leaders said that, should the Southern farmers reject marketing quotas, this action would be interpreted widely as a further indication that farmers generally were dissatisfied with present Administration farm programs. Approval of quotas, on the other hand, would tend to counteract the Midwest election losses and strengthen the present law in the new Congress, these leaders said.

Today's voting will occur in a region where a vigorous campaign has been carried on in behalf of a substitute farm policy. The substitute, called the "domestic allotment" plan, would eliminate the basic principle of New Deal legislation—control of production by means of a system of acreage allotments, benefit payments and marketing quotas—and permit unlimited production.

The Government would assure producers a fixed price, or income, on that portion of their crops consumed in this country. The surplus would be sold abroad at whatever prices it would bring.

I. W. Duggan, AAA director for the South, predicted the marketing

'Oyster War' Ends As 37 Dredgers Are Freed in Court

Annapolis, Dec. 9 (AP).—An "oyster war" between the State conservation commission and dredgermen over closing of seabed areas ended here tonight with dismissal of charges against 19 of 22 dredge boat captains.

The dismissals were in accord with action a few hours earlier at Crisfield, where Magistrate E. P. Wyatt dismissed similar charges against 18 oystermen on the grounds the areas involved had been closed longer than the 2-year period allowed by law.

In trials here, three were found guilty and Magistrate Joseph M. Armstrong suspended fines of $100 and costs in each case.

Those found guilty were Dewey Anderson, S. E. Shores and Ralph Gladen. All were charged with shellfishing on the closed Old Rock bed off Chesapeake Beach. Magistrate Armstrong held there was insufficient evidence against the 19 oystermen to justify conviction.

Britain Asks No Help, Eden Says in Plea for 'Firmer' Democracies

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 9.—Anthony Eden former British foreign secretary, said tonight that the world's democracies must summon all their energies to survive in a "ruthless and challenging" world.

Young, handsome and modestly self-assured, Eden spoke before some 4,000 of the Nation's business and financial leaders at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The huge audience cheered him spontaneously on several occasions.

"It would indeed be the greatest irony in human history," he said, "if mankind were to allow all progress to be stifled by the setting up of a new form of idolatry, the worship of the state, to which all men must bow down, and to which they must sacrifice their freedom of faith, of speech, of worship. Yet such is now the doctrine in many lands, and it has passionate and ruthless devotees."

Eden's topic was "Democracy and the Modern World."

Audience Captivated

He stood on a tiered platform on which sat virtually every leader of American business. Floodlights from the balconies left him undismayed as he pursued his topic with a mixture of light comment and seriousness which captivated his audience.

Describing himself as an "average Englishman here on a friendly visit," Eden said the United States and Great Britain must show the way in the solution of the problems facing the world's democracies.

"What else the world may have been made," he said, "it has plainly not been made safe for democracy.

Not Calling for Help

"We are not calling for help to others, not seeking to lure others to pull our chestnuts from the fire," he said.

"We have no such intention!

"We know that we are destined, in our land and in our time and in our generation, to live in a period of emergency of which none can see the end," Eden said.

"'If throughout that testing time, however long or short it may be, we hold fast to our faith, cradle it in stone and set steel to defend it, we can yet hand on our inheritance of freedom intact to the generations that are to come."

There were frequent interjections

Blast Cuts Off Lights, Snarls Rush Traffic

Underground Cable Burns; Woman Hurt; Liquor Store Robbed

A series of explosions along E street between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets northwest, at the height of the rush-hour traffic yesterday resulted in the following:

All traffic lights throughout the city temporarily stopped operation, causing innumerable traffic jams.

All policemen going off duty at 6 p. m. were held for traffic duty.

In the confusion, a quick-witted robber held up a Thirteenth street

The explosions, caused by smoke unable to find an outlet, blew out three manhole covers of the Potomac Electric Power Company's underground system. According to J. H. Byrd Offers To Help Draft Offices Bill

Says 'No Compromise,' However, on Three Fundamental Policies

By Robert C. Albright.

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, yesterday offered to co-operate with the President in pushing through Congress a "reasonable" Government reorganization bill, but laid down three fundamental lines of "no compromise."

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, placed reorganization near the top of his legislative agenda. He scheduled a series of conferences with House and Senate leaders late this month on other phases of the Administration's program. The conferences will open December 17.

Byrd agreed with Mr. Roosevelt on the urgent need of reorganization. He said he was "ready at any time" to sit down with the President's experts and the Byrnes Reorganization Committee of the Senate in an effort to work out a bill.

"I feel so deeply the need of re-

Police Hunting 'Ape-Man' Here As Sex Maniac

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson last night ordered an extra detail of detectives and police to tour the upper Northwest section of the city for a well-dressed white man with "long ape-like arms" who attempted to attack or rob three white women within an hour two nights ago.

The man, believed by police to be the same man who terrorized women in the Cleveland Park area last spring, attempted to attack a 17-year-old school girl in the 4600 block of Forty-seventh street northwest.

According to the girl the man approached her shortly after she alighted from a bus two blocks from her home. He then pointed a gun at the girl's head and forced her into the shadows of a home in the same block where she lives, threatening to kill her if she made any noise. She ran screaming down the street and the man fled.

Social Security Considering Changes in Old-Age Grants

Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, revealed last night the board is considering a plan for "variable" old-age benefit grants to States based on the economic need of the State.

Addressing the third annual round table conference of the American Public Welfare Association at the Wardman Park Hotel, Altmeyer ventured the opinion that old-age grants thus would become a means for redistribution of wealth, to a certain extent, by States.

The association, at its annual banquet, heard speeches by heads of Federal social services agencies. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt acted as toastmistress.

Government agencies are considering plans for legislation in the next Congress to launch the Administration $800,000,000-a-year national health program, it was disclosed.

The health program was discussed by Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau of the Labor Department, and Dr. Thomas F. Parran, Surgeon General.

Frank Bane, former executive director of the Social Security Board and now executive director of the Council of State Government, at Chicago, recommended a 3-point public welfare program, including the proposal of old-age grants to States on the basis of the need of the State.

The other points were:

Creation of a Federal Department of Public Welfare, already proposed in the Administration departmental re-organization program, to bring together all Federal welfare activities.

A "merit system" for both the Federal Government and States to handle Federal-State co-operative welfare programs.

Addressing Mrs. Roosevelt, Bane gave the following interpretation of the Nove[illegible]

Sloan Asks Cut In Taxes to Aid Heavy Industry

Urges Reductions to Speed Replacement of Obsolescent Plants

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., lean, elegant-mannered chairman of the board of General Motors Corporation, yesterday asked Congress for a general reduction of taxes.

The tall, graying financier, often at odds with the Administration, expressed the profound belief that general tax reduction would act as the sharpest stimulant of industrial production.

In testimony before the Senate Profit-Sharing Committee, Sloan proposed that Congress directly encourage industry to make itself over with new machines by slashing taxes of all businesses which pledge scrapping-and-replacement programs.

Sloan told Chairman Herring (Democrat) of Iowa, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, that obsolescence of machines is now a great national problem. He said the country's "production plant" was out of date and that the slack durable goods industries could be spurred by tax reductions to new achievements in production that would point the way to a general uplift of the national economy.

Sloan appeared to be in virtually complete agreement with the ideas expressed by a previous witness and fellow auto manufacturer, Edsel Ford, of the Ford Motor Co.

Sloan expressed doubts that the profit-sharing idea could be applied to industry generally with beneficial effects. He said there were grounds for fears that any general application would impede or hamper financial operations.

Against Profit Sharing

He said:

"The return on capital employed of the 16 leading industrial organizations in their respective fields, with capital of $100,000,000 or more apiece, has only been 8 per cent over the past 15 years. In all manufacturing companies the average return is less than 5 per cent per year over this period.

". . . Our experience in General Motors has taught us that the best plan is the biggest pay envelope that is possible, under any particular circumstances, supported by the maximum possible protection against the business cycle, the seasonal trend and incapacity to work due to the vicissitudes of life."

Of the profit-sharing principle itself, Sloan said he believed it inapplicable as a broad procedure simply because "outside of a limited number of special cases that always arise, there are not sufficient profits to apply an equitable formula and mean anything consequential to the worker except perhaps in limited periods of prosperity."

Avoids "Incentive" Stand

Sloan took no stand for or against "incentive taxation." The committee has been studying the possibility that tax reductions could be granted to industries pledging co-operation in establishing higher labor and other standards, and Sloan, on this point, said:

"When it comes to the tax incentive as a principle, in the abstract, I am of the opinion that it is impossible to take a position for or against it. Each proposal must be considered not only as to itself, but as to its method of application. Any plan should contemplate a broad application along the industrial front, otherwise it prejdices the competitive set-up and may become a penalty, in some instances, even if it is an incentive in others. If the application is very limited, it becomes a subsidy and that is highly undesirable.

In seeking a general reduction of taxes on business, Sloan spoke bluntly, saying that since "the American production plant is obsolete, as measured by today's technology," the "true way to enlarge present pay envelopes and provide more envelopes for more workers is to do those things that mean lower prices.

"This can be accomplished only by increased productivity.

"Today the tax structure as constituted and its administration tend to discourage the substitution of the new for the old."

Group Honors Roosevelt, The Architect

Membership Given For Designing Home And His Social Vision

President Roosevelt, who designed his own summer cottage for his Hyde Park estate, yesterday was given a draftsman's board and honorary membership in the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians as it opened a three-day convention at the Raleigh Hotel.

The presentation was made by Lewis Alan Berne, international president of the organization, affiliated with the C. I. O., to Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President.

"We welcome him first as an architect who designed his own summer cottage," Berne said, "and we welcome him as an architect whose social vision has designed, in a broader sense, houses for the American people through a functioning housing program."

A message to the federation was sent by John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president. Through unionization the technicians, he said, can be of "estimable service in their influence upon industrial relations and conditions, as well as in reforming industrial policies and objectives."

Berne, in the keynote address yesterday afternoon, said: "We take cognizance of the menace to world peace and progress in the form of fascism, arch enemy of labor, of international morals, of peace. The fight is against those who would destroy the conditions necessary for the continuance of our contributions to society."

Len De Caux, C. I. O. publicity director, spoke on "The Need For the Labor Press."

Last night international executive council awards were presented after which there was a session on professional relations.

Speakers were V. T. Boughton, managing editor of the Engineering News Record; Louis Joutement, president of the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Architects; Dr. Walter N. Polakov, consultant to the United Mine Workers of America, and A. C. Shire, technical director of the United States Housing Authority.

Among the speakers on today's program are Dr. Mordecai Ezekial, assistant planning director of the National Resources Board, and Dean Louis K. Downing, of Howard University.

TVA Denies Giving Special Favors To Co-operatives

By the Associated Press.

The Tennessee Valley Authority was accused yesterday of giving rural electrification co-operatives in the Tennessee Valley certain assistance that was not available to similar organizations in the rest of the country.

The accusation, heatedly denied, was made by two Republican members of the TVA investigating committee — Representatives Jenkins, of Ohio, and Wolverton, of New Jersey.

J. A. Krug, TVA power engineer, replied that the authority was not giving the co-operatives a thing they were not paying for. He insisted that the only advantage they had was the privilege of buying power at "reasonable" wholesale rates.

Hoover Sees Friends, Reticent on Politics

Former President Hoover breakfasted yesterday with Republican leaders and newspaper correspondents but refrained from discussing party politics. Various national and foreign affairs were informally mentioned. Although Hoover avoided politics, his friends were convinced he would continue to take an active interest in Republican affairs.

He was the guest of William R. Castle, former Undersecretary of State. Among those present were John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee; Senators McNary and Vandenberg, Representatives Treadway and Jenkins, Supreme Court Justice Stone and Mark Sullivan.

organization that I am willing to make any reasonable compromise that does not strike at the fundamentals of government and promises economical as well as efficient administration," the Virginian said.

"But I am not willing to concede the President right to operate the Government by decree, as provided in the measure proposed last session."

En route to Boston for a speech today before the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations, Byrd received reporters after President Roosevelt at his morning press conference announced he would send a reorganization bill message to Congress early next session.

The Virginian, who launched the reorganization drive in the Senate three years ago only to have it short-circuited by the President's own study and recommendations, led the opposition to the Administration's merger program in the last Congress.

Lays Down Principles

Yesterday he expressed willingness to compromise on some minor phases, but enumerated three basic features of the President's proposals on which he will not yield.

They were:

Issuance of merger orders by the President, without affirmative approval by Congress.

Clipping of the Comptroller General's present authority to rule on illegal spending.

Setting up of one-man civil service control, in lieu of the existing civil service commission.

Byrd said continued increases in Government personnel and Federal agencies made the need of reorganization more pressing than ever before.

"We should discard political considerations and preconceived notions and approach this problem from the standpoint of a tremendous opportunity to do the country a great service," he said.

"I am concerned with preserving the Constitutional authority of Congress, maintaining the integrity of the Comptroller General's office and continuing a non-partisan Civil Service Commission. Beyond that I will go as far as my convictions will allow to agree on a program that will effect real economy and efficiency."

The President at his press conference said the salient point is that everyone agrees we need improvements in government. Stressing that responsibility for the program will be up to Congress. He said he did not know whether there would be any fundamental changes in the bills, as against last session.

May Yield to Byrnes

Whether the program should be offered in one omnibus measure or in separate bills, the President said is entirely a Congressional matter. This remark led observers to conclude that the President may yield to the view of Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, that splitting the program into a series of measures would smooth the road to enactment.

Byrnes, who is chairman of the Senate Reorganization Committee, and succeeded last session in passing an omnibus Senate bill only to see it recommitted by the House, conferred with the President and members of Mr. Roosevelt's Brownlow reorganization committee on Thursday. The President said good progress was made at the conference.

Byrnes plans to call an early meeting of his reorganization committee, which will handle the bills in the Senate. Senator Byrd, who is ranking Democrat on the Byrnes committee, announced he would also call a meeting of his own Senate committee "on investigation of executive agencies of Government," which was set up by the Senate before the President's reorganization study.

The five members of the Byrd committee are also members of the Byrnes committee, which includes in addition to Byrnes, Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi and Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

The Virginia Senator forecast that the Wheeler amendment, requiring affirmative action by Congress on all merger orders, would be adopted by the Senate. It failed last session by a narrow margin. That, he said, would satisfy his first condition.

If in addition, agreement can be had on power for the controller general to prohibit illegal spending, and on nonpartisan Civil Service administration, Byrd said "there should be no difficulty in passing the legislation."

Byrd said he might offer an amendment to require annual budgeting of some 30 Government corporations which he said now had authority to borrow up to $16,000,000,000 and already have $8,000,000,000 in obligations.

Chicago Mayor Edges Toward Running As 'Draft Ickes' Movement Grows

Chicago, Dec. 9 (AP).—Mayor Edward J. Kelly, urged by several delegations today to run for re-election, came this close to accepting: "I can't find any reason why I should not accept."

KELLY

"Any stories that I am going to the Philippines (as Governor General) or to Washington are all made up out of whole cloth for political reasons," he added.

Meanwhile, Prof. Paul H. Douglas, of the University of Chicago, started for Washington, his business there to include a direct appeal for Interior Secretary Ickes to run for mayor.

Indianapolis, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Indianapolis News in a special dispatch today from Terre Haute says investigators employed by the Republican State Committee have uncovereed "ample information on which to predicate a grand jury investigation, as well as a United States Senate review, of the election in Vigo County."

The information, the dispatch said, shows illegal voting by unregistered persons, open payment of money to voters, counting of mutilated ballots, and other illegal practices.

Senator Van Nuys, Democrat, was declared winner over Raymond Willis, G. O. P. nominee, in the Senate race.

Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, announced yesterday he would introduce in the next session of Congress a resolution opposing a third term for President Roosevelt.

He said he would use the wording of the resolution passed, 56 to 26, by the Senate February 10, 1928, opposing a third term for President Coolidge.

The 1928 resolution was introduced by Senate La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, and supported by leading Democrats.

The West Virginian noted recent statements by Senators Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, and Smathers (Democrat), New Jersey, favoring a third term for President Roosevelt in 1940, commenting:

"Guffey supported the Democratic ticket in Pennsylvania and it was defeated by the Republicans. Smathers supported the Democratic ticket in New Jersey and the Republicans won there."

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—A single term of six years without eligibility to further election as President will be embodied in a constitutional amendment to be introduced at the next session of Congress by Senator Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, he said today.

Burke said the compelling reason was to curb what he called a trend toward more power for the Chief Executive. He emphasized that it was not pointed directly at the present Administration.

Dexter, Me., Dec. 9 (AP).—Representative Brewster (Republican), of Maine, said today he anticipated "renewed and very thorough-going" search for a successful mode of attacking the British and revised Canadian trade treaties by their Congressional foes this winter.

The Representative said he had written G. C. Stone, executive secretary of the Maine Potato Growers' and Shippers' Committee, Inc., that while he would be "delighted" to believe court action could upset the pacts, he did not want to "let my emotion upset my judgment."

Brewster said that upon his return to Washington next week he would go into all phases of the question, "both legal and legislative."

progressive and humane programs evaporate into thin air."

He urged the association to dedicate itself belligerently to the continuation and expansion of New Deal public services.

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, declared he was in some measure discouraged at the privation which still exists.

"Thousands of people," he said, "are living in misery."

He expressed belief, however, that great advances had been made under the New Deal, since "more people are getting a decent share of the national income than ever before."

Nathan Straus, Administrator of the United States Housing Authority, said the housing program "will insure the doom of the slums."

By the Associated Press.

Members predicted last night the social security advisory council either would reject or ignore demands for a change in the tax system now used to finance old-age insurance.

They said full effects of the system were unknown and the present graduated scale of taxes should be left in status quo for another three years at least.

As the act now stands old-age insurance payments will not begin before January 1, 1942, but the council is expected to recommend that the start of payments be moved up to January 1, 1940.

Army Medical Board To Meet Next Month

The War Department yesterday ordered a board of medical and dental officers to convene next month to conduct annual physical examinations of officers and warrant officers of the Army.

The board will be composed of Col. William B. Meister, president; Lieut. Cols. Edward A. Coates, jr., William C. Webb, jr., Stanley G. Odom, Francis M. Fitts and Frank W. Young; Majs. Leon L. Gardner and Harold W. Glattly; Capts. Joseph J. Hornisher, Kenneth A. Brewer, William T. Sichi, Kenneth R. Nelson and Gottliebe L. Orth.

D. A. R. Urges Campaign for 'Americanism'

Lutheran Cleric Hits Federal Church Council For Political Activity

By the Associated Press.

Representatives of the D. A. R. and the Lutheran Church proposed yesterday that the United States protect itself from subversive elements by developing its "Americanism" and by throwing the light of publicity on foreign influences.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, told the House committee on un-American activities the Government should "bring to every citizen an appreciation" of the advantages of life in the United States.

"The first step is to provide the great American public with a concise definition of Americanism," she said. "The second essential is a primer of Americanism."

Calls for Registration

She indorsed a proposal by Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the committee, that all incorporated organizations engaged in political activity be required to report to Congress.

Prof. Theodore Graebner, philosophy teacher at Concordia Theological Seminary of the Lutheran Church, St. Louis, advocated informing the public as to the "meaning of Nazism, Fascism, Sovietism, and opening their eyes to the extent which this evil has attained."

Graebner said Russia had broken its promise to make no efforts from Moscow to spread "Marxian socialism" in the United States.

"If we applied the Soviet standards of what constitutes the right of the State, we should have long ago shipped every unnaturalized Russian out of the country with Leningrad as his destination," he said.

Church Council Attacked

Graebner told the committee that religious leadership has "become infected with political radicalism and outright Bolshevik communism" to "an appalling extent."

Questioned by committee members about his criticism of some religious groups, Graebner said the Federal Council of Churches had "meddled incessantly in political affairs, invariably sponsoring the ideals of radical groups."

At Buffalo, N. Y., the council said Graebner "grossly misrepresented" its "spirit and activity."

aid, he borrowed money hoping against hope that the amount borrowed would see him through his sickness, once more the able bread-winner for his wife and four children.

His ailment proved a stubborn one. Before he was well, all cash resources had been exhausted. Today, Mr. X again is at regular work. But creditors are pressing and his weekly income is not sufficient to meet current expenses and payments on a number of small, miscellaneous debts.

The two older children are doing their share by taking on odd jobs after school hours. The oldest daughter, with an outstanding record in her studies, could leave school and obtain a full-time job. She is an honor student and will receive her diploma in June. Her teachers advise against her leaving at this time, certain that if she is allowed to finish her course a much better position will be available to her later than one she might get now.

In the meantime, the X Family, honest, hard-working and, until now, always self-supporting, needs assistance.

The rough spots of the next few months can be ironed out for it, if you will help. Can you? One hundred dollars is the amount needed.

McAdoo Off to Begin Work With Dollar Line

By the Associated Press.

William G. McAdoo, virtually recovered from an attack of indigestion, left last night for San Francisco to start work as chairman of the board of the American President (Dollar) Steamship Line.

The war-time Secretary of the Treasury and former Senator from California, said "we aim to make the President Line the greatest of that of any flag on the ocean."

Carnegie Board Votes Budget of $1,500,000

Institution's Officer Vacancies Filled; Hoover Attends

With former President Hoover casting his vote along with other board members, trustees of the Carnegie Institution of Washington yesterday authorized a $1,500,000 budget for 1939 and filled vacancies in its membership.

Walter A. Jessup, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, was elected to the board to succeed the late Dr. W. W. Campbell. Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and former Senator Frederic C. Walcott, of Connecticut, were re-elected to the executive committee. Dr. Jessup also was elected to the executive committee.

Dr. John C. Merriam, who will retire as president December 31, addressed the board informally on major matters of institution policy. W. Cameron Forbes, chairman, presided. Mr. Hoover, on his way to New York after the meeting, said, "I am here merely in the interest of pure science, and it is a real pleasure to not have to discuss political affairs."

In addition to those named, the following members attended the annual meeting:

Thomas Barbour, Robert Woods Bliss, Frederic A. Delano, Homer L. Ferguson, Frank B. Jewett, Alfred L. Loomis, Roswell Miller, Henry S. Morgan, Stewart Paton, Elihu Root, jr., Henry R. Shepley, William Benson Storey, Richard P. Strong, Charles P. Taft, Representative James W. Wadsworth and Lewis H. Weed.

Dr. Vannever Bush, who will succeed to the presidency January 1, also was present.

Guests at the luncheon which followed the meeting included Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, widow of the philanthropist who established the institution; Dr. and Mrs. Bush and Sir Richard and Lady Gregory.

Britain Asks For No Help, Eden Declares

Eden

Visit Is Not Official

"I want to emphasize," he said as he started, "that this visit has no political significance whatsoever." Two spontaneous bursts of laughter came from the audience.

"It is not official," Eden continued; "it isn't even semiofficial, nor even one-sixteenth part official. . . . It is a visit of friendship of one Englishman fortunate enough to spend a few days in the United States of America."

He said jocularly that although he had never been here before, his wife had, and that she was "absolutely determined to come again."

In speaking of the determination to maintain "our" conception of the state, he quoted from a book he read on his trip over, "The Human Situation," by McNeil Dixon:

"'The latest and greatest insult you can offer to the human race is to regard it as . . . cattle to be driven to a collective pasture . . . If you treat (man) as a drove of oxen, you take away his birthright.'" This material was not in the advance text.

Speech Is Broadcast

The audiences of 300 radio stations heard Eden, chief British critic of Prime Minister Chamberlain's appeasement policy toward Rome and Berlin.

Eden was cheered loudly when he said:

"Man was not, in our view, made for the state. The state was made for man."

He drew laughter with:

"We in Britain know full well that we are no paragons. If we happen to forget it a moment someone will be sure to remind us of it. We acknowledge, of course, that there are many chequered pages in our long history. One of our worst concerns are dealings with you a hundred and sixty years ago."

Race Against Time

Eden's arrival in the hotel ended a dramatic race against time. A special cutter brought him from the liner Aquitania to the Battery. From there police escorted him to the hotel. After a quick change from street clothes to tails and white tie, Eden walked to the dais in the packed banquet room to the tune of "God Save the King." Toasts were drunk to King George VI and to President Roosevelt.

Eden said that every political system, be it democratic or autocratic, must continually evolve "and in the last resource the survival of democracy must depend upon the faith which it inspires, and the results which, through faith, it can achieve."

In speaking of the conflicting philosophies of the relative importance of man and the State, Eden said, "we are living through an attempt in the totalitarian states to persuade man to reverse his faith." The words "in the totalitarian states" did not appear in his prepared text.

In the speech, his first in this country, Eden approvingly mentioned the new British-United States trade agreement.

"In our conception," he said at another point, "a modern democratic state must be based upon racial and religious toleration. Each citizen must enjoy individual liberty. All must be equal before the law. The rights of minorities and majorities alike must be honored and respected. These beliefs, we are convinced, are the basis of all progress."

An Average Englishman

He prefaced his address with the remark that he represented what he believed to be "the point of view of the average Englishman upon world problems of today."

Aboard the cutter, before his address, Eden said he came to the United States for the first time in his 41 years not "to lecture" but "to listen and to learn."

Reading from a prepared statement, he said:

"People keep asking me what I think are the chances of war? I like to emphasize that I never have accepted and do not now accept the doctrine of the inevitability of war. Such an attitude would be criminal.

"While in the United States I do not propose to comment in any way on British politics or British political figures.

"I'll be here in New York until Monday when I will go to Washington. Lady Lindsay (wife of the English Ambassador) will entertain us there for two nights. Either from Washington or on the way back to New York I am most anxious to see something of Maryland—something of Annapolis. I'd like to see the preparations for the World's Fair.

"We have to sail next Friday, though, for there is such a thing as Chirstmas, you know."

Declining to discuss the Munich treaty, he said:

"Family matters will probably bore you, but my great interest in Maryland is this: My great-great-grandfather was the last colonial Governor of Maryland. He liked the people there and they liked him. He was buried there. Naturally, we have a great interest."

Text of Anthony Eden's Speech on Democracy

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 9.—The complete text of Anthony Eden's address to the National Association of Manufacturers tonight follows:

Though in years gone by I have been fortunate enough to cross that dominion from Quebec to Vancouver, to view its scenic beauties and witness its industrial life, I have only once before, and that for a few hours at Hawaii, set foot on the soil of the United States. You will note, then, how much my education has been neglected, and pardon, I hope, my consequent shortcomings.

Before turning to the immediate subject matter of my speech there is one reference I must make. We are all, I feel sure, glad that a trade agreement has been signed between our two countries. This is neither the time nor the place to discuss its details, but it is all to the good that a step should have been taken which will free and further the flow of commerce in this troubled world. Great credit seems to me to be due, if I may say so, to the two governments, and to the negotiators, for the pertinacity with which they have pursued their objective. The outcome must be particularly satisfying to the President and to Mr. Hull (Secretary of State), who have, despite all difficulties, for so long maintained their confidence in this policy of trade agreements.

Here to Listen and Learn

I hope as the outcome of this visit to the United States, all too short unfortunately though it must be, to learn something of your outlook on world affairs. Nothing is more stimulating to any mind than to view an old problem from a new angle, and so I have come to your great country to listen and to learn much more than to speak. Tonight, however, I appreciate that it is my turn to do my part of the bargain. Though, therefore, what I can tell you is much less valuable than what you could teach me, I am asked to speak to you tonight of the problems that confront democracy in this modern world, and I must perforce do my best.

In what I say to you I shall seek to put before you what I believe to be the point of view of the average Englishman upon the world problems of today. For though there are differences between us at home, even important differences, as there must be in any free community, yet there are certain fundamentals upon which we are all agreed. I belong, as do many of you in this room tonight, to the war generation; to a generation which is sometimes referred to in my country as the missing generation. It is a generation which has, quite literally, been decimated. Almost every family has suffered, some have suffered severely, and as inevitably happens, we have lost our best. Yet perhaps the survivors of that generation have a special right to give their message to the world, to the vigorous combative New World which is taking shape around us at this hour.

Faces Grim Realties

What was it that some 20 years ago we and you both fought to achieve? Men spoke of the war to end war, and even if that seemed to some a goal beyond immediate human reach, we did have faith that the power of arrogant militarism would be destroyed, as we hoped, forever. It was our ambition that the nations should enter upon an era of peaceful relations, when barriers to trade and intercourse between peoples would be broken down; when, in the words later embodied in the Kellogg Pact—which bears the name of one of your own statemen—the nations of the world would renounce war "as an instrument of national policy." Tolerance and justice, we hoped, not force and greed, would rule. Twenty years after we can reflect ruefully how remote we are from the goal of our hopes. We could spend a long time discussing how this has come about. The blame does not lie upon one government alone, nor upon one nation alone. But such jobbing backwards is a vain pursuit, nor is there time for it now. The realties that face us demand all our energy, and all our concentration. What are these realties? They are blunt and grim. National animosities have not been exorcised; on the contrary, they appear to have been intensified under the banner of rival ideologies. Nor has the way to peace been made plain. Whatever else the world may now have been made, it has plainly not been made safe for democracy. Other systems of government, deriving authority from a totally different philosophy, throw out their strident challenge.

These seem to us in our own country to be the forces that confront us. These forces, and the events which they have let loose, have affected England very closely, perhaps even more closely than the United States; or if they have not affected us more closely, they have done so in a different way. Faced with such a challenge, we are acutely conscious of the need to defend ourselves, both materially and spiritually, from the gathering storms, to make sure where we stand, and what it is we stand for, and having made sure, to stand firm. In any self-examination, if it be honest and thorough, we cannot but be conscious of many defects, of many traditions to which we have been content to pay lip service, of a spiritual capital which we have inherited from our fathers, and to which we have not perhaps added our quota.

Decries False Complacency

That is one side of the picture, and a side to which we must not shut our eyes if self-examination is to serve any useful purpose. A false complacency is the worst calamity that can befall any nation in critical times. To realize then, the extent of the challenge that confronts us, and to be conscious of our own shortcomings, are both necessary. But to be conscious of shortcomings is not to proclaim that we are faint-hearted, still less to suggest that we are decadent. Let me say this with all emphasis. I am convinced from my own experience of what men and women in Britain are thinking and feeling today that the British people are just the same people as they have been in the greatest moments of their history; that they have the same beliefs, the same conceptions of life and society. The Great War and its aftermath have not shaken the fundamental faiths, nor undermined the qualities of our people. We do still care deeply, strongly, and for the same things.

It is quite true that we criticize one another sometimes; we have always done so, and I suppose we always shall. In itself this is no unhealthy sign in any free community, but this does not alter the fact that at heart we all want the same things, we all want to preserve our liberties, we all want freedom and security, not only for ourselves, but for our children, and for our children's children. We all want peace, however much we may differ as to the method we think best to follow in order to win the common goal. There is a unity of outlook deeper than all the more superficial disunities of expression. What a nation has in common is what matters most. The still waters of community of outlook sometimes run so deep that they are less noticeable than the controversial ripples on the surface, but they matter more.

Democracy Is a University

It is the essence of democracy that it provides constant schooling in this endless adventure which is the art of government. Democracy is a university in which we learn from one another. It can never be a barracks, where blind obedience is the first essential.

In our university, then, we must be constantly re-examining our political faith, and applying it to the conditions of the modern world. Every political system, be it democratic or autocratic, must continually evolve, and in the last resource the survival of democracy must depend upon the faith which it inspires, and the results which, through faith, it can achieve.

We have to make sure that the way we practice democracy is the most likely way, in the changing circumstances of the world, to guarantee the best and freest life for the members of the community to which we belong. Democracy must have the strength of the best tempered steel, not rigid, but supple. It must have the strength of the highest form of discipline—self discipline. It must have the courage to recognize mistakes and injustices, as well as to stand firm for what is right and what is just. This is a high ideal, but without ideal man will never give of his best. We have to choose what we believe to be the true ideal, and having chosen it, hold to it, and work for it.

Britain's Ideals Like Ours

The differences in my country and yours are many and varied; indeed, I am prepared to discover many more such differences in these next few days than I have been conscious of hitherto. Yet despite them all, our conception of the state in our society is very much the same, and what is more important, I believe it is the right conception, a just conception, and one that gives the best scope for human progress. I believe, too, that if we are determined that it shall survive, it will survive; but if we are not so determined, it may well perish. The clock of human progress will then be set back, and we shall not be faithful trustees of what we have inherited, and we shall leave a legacy of strife and confusion to those who come after us.

I am not going to attempt to define democracy. There are many forms and shades of it in many countries, just as there are many forms and shades of dictatorships. I would therefore concern myself only with what is common to all forms of democracy, and what is the most important aspect of it to those who live under it; what, in fact, we in England, and you in America, cherish most.

We and you stand for democracy because we stand for the rights of the individual; because our purpose is to assure freedom for the expression of thought; to encourage conditions in which the individual human personality can live and grow. Man was not, in our view, made for the state. The state was made for man. The art of government consists in striking a just balance between the claims of the individual, and those of the state to which he owes allegiance.

Sees State as Juggernaut

We are living through an attempt to persuade man to reverse his faith After centuries of endeavor, he is threatened by the state he has himself created. Man's purpose in creating that state was to enable him to live in order and security, to guarantee to him the opportunity to exercise his faculties freely.

It would indeed be the greatest irony in human history if mankind were to allow all progress to be stifled by the setting up of a new form of idolatry; the worship of the state, to which all men must bow down, and to which they must sacrifice their freedom of faith, of speech, of worship. Yet such is now the doctrine in many lands, and it has passionate and ruthless devotees. "Man," said Pascal, "is an incomprehensible creature."

No believer in democracy could ever accept such a state of affairs.

It is not that we, to whom has been handed down this heritage of freedom, have a false conceit of ourselves. We in Britain know full well that we are no paragons. We acknowledge, of course, that there are many chequered pages in our long history. One of the worst concerns our dealings with you, a hundred and sixty years ago.

Yet admitting all this, we know that there are certain standards in which we believe, and which we will not yield up.

In our conception, a modern democratic state must be based upon racial and religious toleration. Each citizen must enjoy individual liberty, all must be equal before the law The rights of minorities and majorities alike must be honored and respected. These beliefs are, we are convinced, the basis of all progress. As an Englishman addressing this great American audience tonight, I tell you that these are the beliefs of our English people still, and that they will hold to them in the years that lie ahead.

Rule of Force Admitted

Let us then sum up, and in so doing let us seek to look into the future.

What do we see?

We see a world vigorous and vital, but ruthless and challenging; a world where force is for many the only instrument of policy.

In such conditions we know that we must believe in ourselves to live. We know that we must champion our ideals, and the faiths to which we hold with an equal strength, or others which we abhor will take their place.

We know that this endeavor will once again tax our strength and our endurance to the uttermost. For all this in spirit we are preparing. Nor are we calling out for help to others, nor seeking to lure others to pull our chestnuts from the fire. We have no such intention!

We know that we are destined, in our land and in our generation, to live in a period of emergency of which none can see the end. If throughout that testing time, however long or short it be, we hold fast to our faith, cradle it in stone, and set steel to defend it, we can yet hand on our inheritance of freedom, intact to the generations that are to come.

Noted Educator Weds Professor

Northampton, Mass., Dec. 9 (AP).—The marriage of Sir Herbert Grierson, 70, lord rector of Edinburgh University and research professor at Smith College, to Miss Margaret Storrs, 40, former Smith professor of philosophy, was announced today by the college.

The announcement said the wedding took place in England on December 7 and the couple was en route back to the United States. They will make their home in Northampton.

PoliceGuard Home Of Industrialist Following Threat

Mount Kisco, N. Y., Dec. 9 (AP).—Police today guarded the Katonah home of Mrs. Frederick D. Huntington, wife of the treasurer of the Real Silk Corporation of New York, after a telephone caller demanded $50,000 under threat of bodily harm.

In a gruff voice, the man on the telephone instructed her:

"Tell your husband to provide $50,000 within the next 48 hours. Otherwise something will happen to you. I will send you further instructions."

"A MILLION THANKS For Teaching Me This about COLDS"

"IT CERTAINLY IS WONDERFUL to be able to face trouble without worrying myself sick when colds threaten the health and happiness of my family. I say, a million thanks to Vicks for teaching me the way to deal with colds."

That is the voice of mothers—your neighbors among them—who have learned by experience to depend on Vicks Plan, which emphasizes the importance of proper personal care and the use of specialized medications for relief of symptoms in different types and stages of colds.

When colds threaten—at the first nasal irritation, sniffle, or sneeze—they use Vicks Va-tro-nol to help prevent many a cold from developing. When a cold does get by all precautions, they use Vicks VapoRub to relieve its discomforts.

This famous plan was developed by Vick chemists and their medical consultants, who have continuously studied the problem of colds for nearly half a century. It comes to you doubly proved:

1. Proved in one of the largest series of clinical tests ever made on colds—17,353 men, women, and children took part in these tests—37 doctors were on the supervisory staff. In this great clinic, Vicks Plan sharply reduced the number and length of colds—cut sickness from colds more than half—cut school absences due to colds even more.

2. Proved by actual everyday use in millions of homes like yours.

This proof speaks for itself. Vicks Plan may do less for you—or it may do even more. But with such a record it certainly is worth a trial. It is easy to follow in any home. Full directions in each package of Va-tro-nol or VapoRub.

To Help PREVENT Many Colds

Va-tro-nol is specialized medication for the nose and upper throat, where 3 out of 4 colds start. You feel the tingle as this stimulating medication goes right to work and aids Nature's own defenses against colds. Used at the very first nasal irritation, warning sniffle or sneeze, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds from developing. So keep it handy and use it early.

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

To EASE Discomfort of Colds

VapoRub is the standby of most mothers for relieving misery of colds. Massaged on throat, chest, and back, VapoRub works two ways at once: (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Its medicated vapors are inhaled direct to the irritated air-passages. This quickly loosens phlegm—clears the air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion—and you soon feel comfortable again.

Industry Urges Confidence as Labor Solution

It Can't Be Legislated, Declare Leaders at Manufacturers' Parley

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 9.—The Nation's business leaders who had gathered for the forty-third congress of American industry of the National Association of Manufacturers tonight wound up their three-day meeting with an observance of "Labor Day."

They stressed the necessity of co-operation between employer and employe, but emphasized that co-operation can only come through mutual confidence and "mutual confidence can never be legislated."

The convention previously had adopted a program for industry in 1939 in which the group which favored Government co-operation won a close victory after several years of strife over more conservative elements which had insisted upon recommendation of changes in the national labor relations act and elimination of special Government agencies.

"Work, Saving" Urged

The powerful resolutions committee and the convention approved of "work, saving, invention and wholesome competition" and added that "America's main problem today is how to apply these time-tested principals and institutions to the conditions and requirements of present-day society."

Roy W. Moore, president of Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., said in an address:

"Maladjustments" resulting from plication of the national labor relations act show "more clearly than ever the folly of hastiness in the enactment of legislation."

"Any law which does not seek to provide equal treatment for all who are affected by its provisions will not support a stable and healthy democracy," he added.

Moore spoke as chairman of the association's committee on employment relations.

Industrial Disruption Hit

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, declared that society has reached a new conception of the relationship which ought to prevail between employes and employers.

"It will not tolerate," he said, "any policies of industry that are unfair and oppressive to those who toil in mill and factory. Nor will society much longer permit disruption of industry because of unreasonable demands of self-seeking labor leaders."

Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the wage-hour act, reminded the businessmen "of the stake that we all have, here in the United States, in making our democracy work—our economic democracy as well as our political democracy.

Wage Act Defended

He told them that the fair labor standards act "is not a straight jacket nor a device to harass employers. It is not a scheme to revamp American industry."

"It is," he added, "a measure to improve working conditions, to eliminate unfair competition and to add to the purchasing power without which the most progressive business can have only a temporary success."

A. W. Hawkes, president of Congoleum-Nairin, Inc., of Kearny, N. J., said the important problem before both capital and labor was adoption of a policy founded upon true mutuality.

D. M. Nelson, vice president of Sears-Roebuck & Co., discussed industry's part in forming minimum wage basis." R. R. Deupree, president of the Proctor & Gamble Co., spoke on importance of a steady job and Calvert Magruder, counsel for the wage-hour administration, conducted a question and answer discussion on the wage-hour act.

Woodrum to Fight Appropriation for New Undertakings

Skeptical of the Administration's ability to hold down appropriations in the face of defense requirements, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, warned yesterday against "large new Government undertakings."

Woodrum, whose independent offices appropriations sub-committee opened hearings here Monday, said he favored "aggressive national defense preparations" but will fight other costly "new undertakings."

He said the budget would be endangered by millions proposed in the Harrison education bill, by the interdepartmental committee's proposed 10-year $850,000,000 socialized medicine program and by the Norris "little TVA" proposals.

Tri-State Packers Say Wage Act Will Cut Employment

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 9 (AP).—The New Deal, and especially the wage-hour law, was under fire today at a convention of the Tri-State Packers Association, attended by 300 canners and packers of New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

As a result of the wage-hour law, President Herman N. Lutz, of Williamstown, said: "This country will experience the greatest machine age ever, with more labor out of employment and on relief."

Boy's Own Blood Transfused After Heart Operation

Philadelphia, Dec. 9 (AP).—A transfusion of his own blood and a delicate heart operation gave 14-year-old Adam Efymow a chance for life tonight.

A surgeon took three stitches in the boy's heart shortly after he was stabbed accidentally by a chum with whom he was struggling for possession of a 3-inch fish knife.

A pint of blood which bled from the heart wound was drained from the pericardial sac surrounding the heart and injected into the boy's veins.

newed, he said, about two years ago, served traffic and street lights as well as private buildings. Ferry happened to be at the scene when the covers blew off and he helped direct extinguishing of the flames.

No. 2 Engine company pulled off a manhole cover at the corner of Ewelfth and E streets to allow flames to leap into the air.

Unable to use water and not equipped with proper chemicals, firemen waited until Pepco trouble men arrived with carbon dioxide gas to attempt to smother the flames. A workman went into the manhole but was overcome. Flames persisted underground for more than an hour.

As traffic lights went out or stayed in the position they had been in, traffic throughout the entire congested area immediately became snarled and tangles were reported from important intersections in outlying regions.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, was caught in one of the many traffic jams. He took charge of directing the police by telephone from his home when he arrived there.

Inspector James F. Beckett ordered all available policemen to dangerous intersections. He reported 61 men on duty in the congested area. Then police precincts were ordered to send one man each to the downtown area and all 6 o'clock leaves were canceled.

While many minor accidents were reported in the hour following the explosion, only one person was admitted to a hospital for traffic injuries. That was Mrs. Alice Poeppen, 35, 510 North Glebe road, Arlington, Va., who was struck while crossing at Fifteenth and K streets northwest. She was admitted to Emergency Hospital for leg and head injuries. Driver of the automobile which hit her was not held by police.

Police reported the majority of motorists drove with caution while the lights did not work.

At Fifteenth and H streets northwest one of the worst traffic jams took place when a man in plain clothes moved to the center of the intersection and started directing traffic. Interested citizens crowded about the man until a taxi driver arrived and pointed out the self-appointed traffic director was a detective. Then the crowd dispersed.

Other bad jams were reported at Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest, Fourteenth and U streets northwest, Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest, and Georgia and Sherman avenues.

While police were temporarily disorganized to handle traffic, a well-dressed white man walked into the Iowa liquor store, at 1317 Thirteenth street northwest. He told H. Gurvich, proprietor, he wanted a candy bar. Gurvich later told police that when he turned from getting the candy the man was pointing a gun at him and said, "Your money or I'll blow your brains out."

Gurvich told police he did not hinder the man from taking $30 from the cash register and escaping on foot.

A survey by a Post reporter half an hour after the explosion occurred showed that many of the lights had returned to operation, that police were in charge at most important intersections in the downtown area and that traffic was moving almost normally.

Particularly along H street and Eleventh street traffic lights still were out, but at intersections not controlled by police motorists crossed or made turns only with caution.

French Arabs Pledge War to Save Tunisia

Chieftains Say Tribes Will Fight to Last Man If Italy Invades

By the Associated Press.

Tunis, Tunisia, Dec. 9.—Arab chieftains of Tunisia proclaimed their readiness today to fight for France, if necessary, to beat off any Italian attempt to seize this strategic North African territory.

"Tunisians are ready to defend to the last man the integrity of their land and respect for treaties which unite them to France," Ahmed Chenick, vice president of the Tunisian section of the Arab grand council, declared in an interview.

"To confuse Tunisia with Ethiopia or the Sudetenland is a bad error of psychology."

He said the Tunisian section of the Arab grand council, in the name of more than 2,000,000 natives, had sent assurances to French Resident-General Erick Labonne of their loyalty and desire "to live as free men under the aegis of France."

Armed Forces Ready

Imposing forces of French police, mobile guards and troops meanwhile remained on watch to check any new outbreaks like yesterday's rival demonstrations of French and Italian sympathizers but the day, a Moslem day of worship, passed in tense quiet.

The exact number of men under arms was kept a military secret, although the army is known to number about 15 peacetime regiments, or 45,000 men, including natives.

Police and mobile guards protected the Italian consulate here, the offices of the Fascist newspaper Unione, the Italian Aerial and Maritime Navigation Co., and the Italian library and bank.

Mounted and motorized police patrolled all main roads and searched all automobiles and trucks entering the city.

Loyalty Is Pledged

Characteristic gesture of loyalty to France was the sending of a telegram to Labonne by the municipal council and the War Veterans' Association of Moknine, stating "the Moslem population is ready to shed its last drop of blood to maintain the absolute integrity of the French Empire."

The Tunisian Moslem League telegraphed Premier Edouard Daladier of France its "indignation" against the Italian campaign, promising that no Moslem would accept Italian domination in Tunisia and that all were ready to sacrifice their lives in defense of the territory.

The native population of Tunisia is 2,395,108, spread out over an area of 48,300 square miles—about one-fourth the size of France. Tunisia's situation on Africa's north coast, with a narrow projection northward to within 43 miles of the Italian Mediterranean Island of Pantelleria, makes it important strategically in control of the Mediterranean.

Demonstrators Surprised

Rome, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Police and Carabiniera today charged into crowds of Italian students, scuffling with them and administering bloody noses, in what appeared to mark a sudden change in official methods of dealing with anti-French demonstrations in the streets of Rome.

For the first time in more than a week the authorities used stern methods in dispersing the demonstrators, and several were arrested after a three-hour clamoring for French territories.

Foreign Minister Ciano late today received the British Ambassador, Lord Perth, at Chigi Palace, supposedly for a discussion of the Italo-French tension and plans for Prime Minister Chamberlain's visit to Rome early next month.

Several hundred high school students—none appeared more than 14—began marching down the Corso Umberto shouting "Tunisia! Corsica!" as they had done in past days without discouragement. They tried to reach Venice Square and demonstrate outside the office of Premier Mussolini.

But to their surprise the police and carabinieri swept down on them and broke up the procession. More than 500 students were turned away from Venice Square. Several hundred, spurred on by an official of an Italian newsreel company, marched to the railway station led by a flag-bearer and shouting "Corsica! Tunisia!" The police, after trying to disperse them, finally agreed to let them march if they would keep away from Venice Square and not molest French property.

The Fascist controlled press showed no signs of relaxing its attack and demands against France.

Editors were convinced Germany would back up Italy in any crisis and that next year would bring an Italian diplomatic victory in the Mediterranean.

Jobs Held Key To Problem Of Refugees

Mrs. Olmsted, Back From Europe, Tells Of Wide Discontent

The European refugee problem will never be solved until international unemployment is reduced to a minimum through reorganization of the economic system in the opinion of Mrs. Mildred Scott Olmsted, organization secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Just returned from an executive committee meeting in Geneva, Mrs. Olmsted was in Washington yesterday working on her report at the local headquarters of the league.

"Colonization is only a partial answer," she observed, "although it seems to me that a world survey would reveal many places that need the services of these people."

Although without large financial resources, the league has undertaken the task of aiding refugees from Germany through its branches in the leading countries of the world.

"While one hears more about the Jews who have been driven from their German homeland, there are thousands of others—Catholics, Communists and political nonconformists—who are wandering homeless in Europe."

The world-wide depression, Mrs Olmsted said, has made these refugees an international problem.

"I found that many people in Germany, however, do not approve of the persecution of the Jews," she said.

Niemoeller Faces Ouster by Church

Berlin, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—The German church ministry is preparing to deprive the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, militant leader of the anti-Nazi Synod of the Lutheran Church and for several months held in custody, of his rank of evangelical minister, it was announced today.

Since Niemoeller was suspended from office on charges of preaching opposition to the government he has not been drawing a salary but his ouster from office will deprive his family of a home in church-owned buildings. Pastors' organizations also will be forbidden to help the Niemoeller family.

Intrastate Wire-Tapping Is Declared Illegal

Holmes Compares Capetown to Rio

Capetown, South Africa, is a rival for beauty of setting to Rio de Janeiro, Burton Holmes, traveler and lecturer, told members of the National Geographic Society last evening at Constitution Hall. Holmes made this best-known port of South Africa the starting point for a pictured journey through Cape of Good Hope Province, Natal, Orange Free State and other provinces. Near Capetown he visited the famous home of Cecil Rhodes, now a national shrine.

Holmes visited Durban which, he declared, has a "super-California climate; Johannesburg and its mile-deep gold mines on the famous Rand. From there he traveled to Pretoria, administrative capital of South Africa and then pushed northward into Rhodesia, concluding his tour at the famous and spectacular Victoria Falls in the Zambesi River.

Premier Daladier Wins a Vote of Confidence by 315 to 241

French

that France is shaped to receive a kick."

The chamber debate became increasingly turbulent as it extended into the night, with deputies following one another to the tribune to explain their votes for or against the government.

Angry Taunts Exchanged

An exchange of taunts between left and right sides grew so loud while Jean Montigny, conservative, was speaking that the session was temporarily suspended at 11:20 p. m.

Group meetings of deputies after the premier's half-hour defense of his domestic and foreign policies had indicated the government held a lower house majority of conservatives and rightists against the Communist and Socialist opposition.

The premier defended his understanding with Germany, his three-year plan of "economic mobilization" and his action in repressing labor's protests against that plan. He asked the Chamber of Deputies to furnish a mandate to proceed.

Test Poll Backs Premier

Originally it had been planned to ask for the vote of confidence tomorrow, but Daladier went to the speaker's tribune a day earlier to cut short debate and test his parliamentary strength. A poll in chamber lobbies had indicated he would win by about 320 to 230.

Daladier was bitter in his attack on the Communist opposition.

"We are at an hour," he said, "when brutal frankness is better than all hypocrisies. You must decide today to overthrow me or to permit me to continue my efforts."

He read Communist speeches and documents to support his charge that the November 30 general strike movement in protest against his economic decrees was really a political movement against the government and to justify his use of military requisition, troops and stern police measures to smash the movement.

Berates Communists

Facing the Communists benches, Daladier declared:

"It is useless to talk of a strong, free and happy France if you begin by paralyzing it."

Turning to foreign policy, the premier said, "I want peace with Germany," but warned, "the integrity of France depends first on the French."

He appealed finally for a vote of confidence with a promise that the decree laws would be open to improvement as the three-year recovery plan progressed. There were cries of protest from the left and shouts of support from the right.

Earlier Finance Minister Paul Reynaud, author of the decree laws under which Daladier sought to rehabilitate France, was cheered from the center and right as he declared the government's program bearing fruit. He remarked that "important developments will occur shortly concerning the public credit of France abroad."

Declaring that "to make France strong her finances must be restored," Reynaud pointed out that the French government had borrowed 30,000,000,000 francs from the Bank of France in 1936; 40,000,000,000 in 1937; 45,000,000,000 in 1938, and would have had to borrow the colossal sum of 55,000,000,000 in 1939 if he had not reversed the engines by cutting down expenses and increasing taxation. But for his decree law, inflation in France would have been inevitable, Reynaud asserted.

Raft Invites Hahn Boy to Hollywood

Hollywood, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—George Raft, film actor, today invited 12-year-old Oscar Hahn, son of Anna Marie Hahn, who was executed Wednesday at Columbus, Ohio, for murder, to spend the Christmas holiday with him. The lad is with one of his late mother's lawyers in Columbus.

Six Go to Chair In Mass Execution At Georgia Prison

Tattnall Prison, Reidsville, Ga., Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Six colored men, all murderers, started singing early today in death cell row. By afternoon their songs had been ended and they had died in the electric chair in Georgia's largest mass execution.

If your taste is for dryer drinks

As America's first gin distiller, we cater to the American taste for dry drinks.
Fleischmann's is not a liqueur type gin.
It is extra dry—not sweet.
That's one reason why it blends so beautifully with vermouth and fruit juices.
Another plus in its favor is the quality of the spirits that go into Fleischmann's Gin. Every drop is Fleischmann-distilled from grain to bottle.
Try it in your home. Call for it at the bar.

Nazi Consul Got Canal Photos, Spy Jury Told

Officer Says Suspect Told Him Pictures Went to Official

By the Associated Press.

Cristobal, Canal Zone, Dec. 9.—A Canal Zone police officer testified today Hans Heinrich Schackow, 26-year-old German, told him of taking pictures of Canal Zone fortifications and handing them to the German Consul here for "safekeeping." Schackow is accused of espionage.

The police officer, Lieut. J. M. Davis, said Schackow related he snapped pictures of Gatun Locks from the German liner Patria October 14, and photographed the Isthmus trail followed by the Fourteenth Infantry during maneuvers.

All of the pictures, Lieut. Davis said Schackow told him, were handed to Kurt Lindberg, German Consul.

Capt. Holbrook Gibson, commanding officer of the Navy's submarine base at Coco Solo, testified the photographs were of first-line defenses and included Galeta Island, where international cables have terminals.

He said the photographs would be of great assistance to enemy naval forces in affecting a landing.

Z. E. Foster, timekeeper of the Coco Solo fleet air base, said he saw Schackow and three others accused with him at 4 a. m. on October 16, attempting to get to Cayuco to go fishing off Galeta Point.

The other three defendants, who with Schackow, were arrested October 16, are Mrs. Ingebord Guttman, Gilbert Gross and Ernst Edward Kuhrig.

The four, in company of a soldier, were attempting to leave by way of the Golks River landing because of difficulty in passing a sentry at Fort Randolph, which is the normal route to Cayuco, Foster testified.

The witness said Kuhrig, a co-defendant with Schackow, told the soldier he wanted to get military secrets. He quoted the soldier, whose name was not revealed, as saying he would help, although there might be difficulties.

Brig. Gen. Richard C. Moore, commanding the Atlantic sector of the Canal Zone, testified earlier photographs of the coast line, used by a foreign power in connection with other information, could be most injurious to the United States.

System to Combat Spies in U. S. Organized, Roosevelt Reveals it was learned, and no such group will be set up.

The President disclosed that Hardy had pleaded to be allowed to resign for personal reasons, and that he will reluctantly accept the resignation next month.

He praised Hardy's work as an amazing job, emphasizing the difficulties encountered in tracing the ramifications of foreign spies.

The declaration to move directly against foreign spies came as a special official board under Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn completed recommendations to Congress for additional Navy bases—aerial, destroyer, submarine and mine.

While the recommendations were confidential it was believed the bases would be established in Alaska, Puerto Rico, New England, Virginia and Florida.

Chairman Andrew J. May, Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, indicated that further Army air bases as well as Navy bases would be proposed at the next session. He told the Army and Navy Register, service publication, that he favored Army bases in Alaska, New England and somewhere in the Southeast, as well as the central Pacific area. Only one Army base of the six authorized by Congress in 1935 has been started.

May said he favored expansion of the Army Air Corps by not more than 5,000 war planes, instead of the larger force urged by some advisers.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, said after seeing the President yesterday that Congress would approve "adequate" defense. He noted probable revision of his earlier forecast of the program to say that the Navy had aske d budget approval of funds to start work on two more battleships—seventh and eighth to be undertaken—two cruisers, eight destroyers and eight submarines. He announced a plan to modernize the mammoth aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga.

74 Planes Bought By U. S. Army for Observation Duty

A $2,346,000 contract for 74 observation planes has been awarded to North American Aviation, Inc., of Englewood, N. J., Assistant Secretary of War Johnson announced yesterday.

Fifty of the three-place monoplanes, he said, will be used by the National Guard and 24 will be operated by the Regular Army.

Film Celebrities Subpenaed in Philippine Fraud

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Thirteen Hollywood celebrities, including Miriam Hopkins and Ronald Coleman, have been called to New York in connection with a Philippine Railway bond fraud allegedly perpetrated by William P. Buckner, stock broker, Federal officials said tonight.

Other notable subpenaed include Frank Morgan, Bing Crosby, Herbert Marshall, Binnie Barnes, Cary Grant, Phyllis Brooke, and Leon Errol; also Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of United Artists; Nola Hahn, owner of Hollywood's Clover Club, and two scenarists, Nick Carter and Jean McGileski.

Typhoon Sweeps Philippines; 45 Die, Many Hurt

Manila, Dec. 9 (AP).—Over crippled communications came reports today of 45 deaths, of many thousands of homeless and of uncounted numbers injured in the path of the vicious typhoon which swept the Central Philippines yesterday and whirled away over the China Sea.

Days may elapse before the full extent of the disaster is known. The great tropical storm tore down wires and wrecked roads in 15 provinces as it passed in a zigzag course 100 to 250 miles south of Manila.

Relief workers counted 12,000 homeless in one district of Samar Island alone.

U. S., Without Counter-Espionage, Long Has Laughed at Foreign 'Plots'

Folliard

tional jealousy, but more often it is simply because the United States has been slow in taking spies seriously.

Last June Senator Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, suggested that there be set up in the Federal Bureau of Investigation a special group of G-men specifically assigned to counter-espionage work.

But even if that is done, it still will be necessary to foster a great co-ordination of effort among the various governmental agencies that are in a position to detect espionage.

Foreign espionage has increased in the United States as the totalitarian powers have grown in strength abroad, and it is agreed that today there are more spies here than ever in the country's peace-time history. Most of them represent three powers—Germany, Japan and Russia.

Reds Warn of Spies Here

A year ago, Mikhail Petrovich Frinovsky, vice commissar of the Soviet secret police, warned the United States that it was being overrun with German and Japanese spies. If Army and Navy intelligence officers were astonished at this tip, they could not be blamed. For years their chief worry has been the spying and sabotage efforts of Moscow-inspired Communists.

The European nations are said to be spending between $50,000,000 and $80,000,000 a year on all kinds of espionage. England, long a favorite haunt of foreign spies, has had to vastly increase the appropriation for its secret service.

So far as is known, the United States has no paid, professional spies. What information it gets concerning foreign armaments and plans is gathered by its Army and Navy attaches in the various countries of the world and by patriotic volunteers.

America's machinery for counter-espionage, the running down of spies in this country, is no where near as elaborate or as efficient as that in other large countries. Neither the Army nor the Navy has a real investigating staff for this purpose.

The Navy is said to have a few civilians left over from the World War days, whose chief duty is the secret searching of baggage of suspicious visitors, shadowing suspects and checking on subversive organizations. Admittedly, however, these are not enough to cope with the problem as it exists today.

Insofar as they have been able, the Army and the Navy have taken every precaution to guard against spies. Navy yards and Army air fields are policed as they never have been before in peace time. The Office of Naval Intelligence is reported to have bought new safes for its secrets, and to have ordered Navy officers traveling with confidential papers to use staterooms instead of upper or lower berths.

Actually, the experts say, there are not many military secrets. Most nations know what the other nations have in the way of armaments. However, there are some things—technical information about aviation, for example—which Uncle Sam would like to keep to himself.

The greatest danger to the spy is the patriotic citizen who, suspicious of his activities, tips off the Federal authorities. Since the trial and conviction of three German spies in New York, FBI headquarters there has been inundated with letters and telephone calls regarding espionage. Many of these, no doubt, have come from cranks or persons with lurid imaginations. However, on the theory that some may lead to real spies, the G-men are investigating all of them.

Bethesda Presbyterians Seek $40,000

THE REV. MR. PARKES
(church pastor)

Five-Week Campaign Makes Two Morning Services Necessary

Tomorrow, ending the fifth week of a drive to raise $40,000 for a new church and Sunday school building, parishioners of Bethesda Presbyterian Church will have an opportunity to give cash or pledges for this fund, at both the 9 and 11 a. m. services.

Church membership has grown so rapidly during this five-week campaign that it has been necessary to schedule three services every Sunday to take care of the increasing crowds.

In the afternoon, canvassers, under direction of R. E. Bondy, will visit the homes of those not pledging in the morning. Pledges may run for as long as 40 months, for those who wish a long period in which to pay.

Metropolitan. "Desire, the Basic Fact of Humanity," will be Dr. J. Lowrey's morning topic. In the evening he will discuss "The Heroism of Christianity."

New York Avenue. Dr. Peter Marshall, minister, will have for his topic at 11 a. m. "The Christian Secret." At 8 p. m. his topic will be "The Physicist and the Candle."

"L' Humble Devoir" will be the sermon theme of the Rev. A. F. Liotard at the French service at 4 p. m.

Chevy Chase. "Hound of Heaven" will be the subject of Dr. J. Hillman Hollister's sermon at the 11 a. m. service.

Central. Dr. James H. Taylor will preach in the morning on "Christianity in the World Today," and in the evening on "The Blessing of a Great Companionship."

Gunton-Temple. Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor, will have as his subject at the 11 a. m. service, "The Basic Values of the Bible."

Covenant-First. Dr. Albert J. McCartney returned to the city after attending the biennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America at Buffalo. He will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "Aristarchus."

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor will address the meeting of the Business Women's Council at 8 p. m. Tuesday on her journeys to China and Japan in the China Clipper.

Sherwood. The Rev. Thomas L. Coyle will preach at the 8:50 and 11 a. m. services on "Emotionalism." The Rev. Thomas Coyle, sr., pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Westhampton Beach, L. I., and father of the minister, will be guest preacher for the evening service at 8 o'clock.

Falls Church. "The Lost Christ" is the theme of Dr. Alton B. Altfather's sermon at 11 o'clock.

Christian Science Topic 'God, Preserver of Man'

"God, the Preserver of Man," is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 40:11, "Withhold not Thou, thy tender mercies from me, O Lord: let thy loving kindness and Thy truth continually preserve me."

Among citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thy righteousness is like the great mountains; thy judgments are a great deep: O Lord, thou preservest man and beast." (Psalms 36:6).

Sonia Dingol to Speak

Sonia Dingol, national secretary of Young Judea, will speak at a meeting of the Washington Council of the movement tomorrow afternoon in the home of the council president, Rebecca Rabinovitz, 3556 Warder street northwest.

Ordination Set Monday for Son Of Italian Cleric

Rev. M. C. Marseglia Is Pastor of Baptist Church Here

"The Christian Service in Newness of Spirit" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. M. C. Marseglia tomorrow at 10:45 a. m. in the Italian Baptist Church of the Redeemer.

Monday, at 8 p. m., the Rev. Mr. Marseglia's son, Olindo, will be ordained to the ministry by the Council of Baptist Churches of the District of Columbia, the first such ordination in Washington.

Takoma Park. In observance of Universal Bible Sunday, the Rev. William E. La Rue will speak at the morning service on "Far Reaching Consequences." At the evening hour he will discuss "The Bible Endures."

Fifth. Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Religion in the Home," and at 7:45 p. m. on "The Art of Playing Second Fiddle."

First. "The Cross and Christmas" will be the theme of Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden in the morning, when the Lord's Supper will be observed. In the evening the pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., assistant minister of First Congregational Church, who will speak on "The Recovery of Power." Swedish services will be held in the afternoon, Dr. K. E. Carlson preaching.

Metropolitan. In the morning Dr. John Compton Ball will give the hand of fellowship to the new assistant pastor, the Rev. Robert Savage and Mrs. Savage. Last Sunday the Rev. Mr. Savage performed his first baptismal ceremony, on his wife. Dr. Ball will preach in the morning on "God's Best Seller."

In the evening the Rev. Mr. Savage will speak on "The Crucified Christian."

Bethesda. At the morning service the pastor, Dr. J. Raymond Nelson, will speak on "The First Requirement."

His topic for the evening service at 8 p. m. will be "Birth of the Forerunner." The services are held in the Masonic Hall.

Chevy Chase. The Rev. Edward O. Clark will preach on "Getting Ready for Christmas," at the 11 o'clock service.

"And He Came Unto His Father," a Bible drama, will be given by the young people of the Sunday Evening Club at 8 p. m.

Calvary. The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, pastor, will preach in the morning on "When Noise Becomes Music"—a sermon to boys and girls. He will be assisted by Miss Muriel Twiford and George Nussbaum. The Junior Church Choir will furnish one musical number, directed by L. C. Greene. At the evening service the pastor will speak on "His Own Clothes," and Miss Ruth Schlitzkus and Joseph L. Phillips will assist.

The Junior Church will not hold a separate service tomorrow morning.

Columbia Dean Speaks Tomorrow At Cathedral

Dr. Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the graduate school of journalism at Columbia University, will speak on "Religious Freedom—A New Perspective of Our Liberties," at the Choral Evensong service in Washington Cathedral at 4 p. m. tomorrow. The sermon at Morning Prayer at 11 a. m. will be delivered by the Rev. William M. Bradner, canon precentor.

A member of the Cathedral Council for six years, Dean Ackerman first became associated with the Cathedral Foundation in 1923, when he was invited by Bishop James E. Freeman to become director of public relations at Mount St. Alban. He was elected to the vestry of Old Trinity Church, New York, shortly after taking up his work at Columbia, where he obtained his degree in journalism in 1913. He is a native of Indiana, graduate of Earlham College, and traveled throughout the world during his career from 1916 to 1922 as foreign correspondent and author.

Other services in the Cathedral tomorrow will include celebrations of Holy Communion in the Bethlehem Chapel at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m. After the 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. services, pilgrimages through the Cathedral will be conducted for the benefit of visitors from out of town.

City Changes, but Not Loyalty Of Westminster Presbyterians

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Depue, shown above, were married in Westminister Church January 1, 1899, and will celebrate their golden anniversary there in three weeks. The present church building is a memorial to her father and brother, both elders and trustees of the church for years

Government and Commercial Buildings Have Displaced Many Private Homes in Area, but Old Members Come From Afar

Unswerving loyalty to church and family traditions characterizes the Presbyterian Congregation of Westminister Church Memorial Church for 85 years.

For, while Government and commercial buildings have encroached, and residents have scattered to other parts of the city, the congregation has remained loyal to the church, located on Seventh street near D, where many of their forebearers worshiped and served.

Many of the Southwest's citizens have played a large role in development of the church, whose present leader is the youthful Rev. Harry V. Porter.

Among these are Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Depue, who were married at Westminster January 1, 1889, and who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary in three weeks.

The present Westminster edifice, constructed at the turn of the century and remodeled in 1926, memorializes Mrs. Depue's father, the late Charles B. Church, and her brother, the late W. A. H. Church, sr., both elders and trustees of the parish.

Depue's father, the late Abraham Depue, was a ruling elder for many years.

Upholding tradition at Westminster, W. A. H. Church, jr., local lumber dealer, serves as Sunday school treasurer and leader of the fellowship group.

J. M. Sanders, president of the Automotive Association of the District and vice president of Hill & Tibbetts, is an active Westminster worker, as well as his wife, who aids in distribution of books to patients at Gallinger, under supervision of the Hospital Committee of the Church Federation.

Also active are Mrs. Carrie V. Byram, the organist who boasts a record of 33 years' teaching service at Eastern High, and E. L. Kahlert, of the War Department, Sunday school teacher who will direct a young people's play at Christmas. E. R. Altman, primary and beginners' instructor; B. F. Anderson, president of the board of trustees, and Mrs. Sofie T. Miller, the latter oldest in point of membership. Mrs. Margaret E. Taylor also has been a long and hard worker.

Mrs. Porter, the pastor's wife, who leads the junior Christian Endeavorers, and who will direct a Christmas youth presentation of Maunder's "Bethlehem," has as co-workers in young people's activities Miss Shirley Hubner, daughter of the assistant leader of the Army Band, and Mildred Barton.

Mrs. Porter also is president of the Woman's Missionary Society. Other organization leaders are Mrs. Edith Altman, of the Ladies' Aid Society, and Miss Irma Gordon, of the Fidelis Club, a young women's group.

Outstanding among the Rev. Mr. Porter's predecessors at Westminster was the Rev. Benjamin F. Bittinger, who served from 1857 until 1863, and who returned in 1868 to serve continuously until 1900. Under his leadership, Westminster made its greatest strides.

The Rev. Mr. Porter will conduct morning worship tomorrow, preaching on "A Light in the Night." In the evening his subject will be "What a Christian Believes About the Virgin Birth."

Churches Mark Bible Sunday Tomorrow

Scriptures' Publication In 1,000 Languages To Be Celebrated

President Roosevelt has given his indorsement to the observance tomorrow of Universal Bible Sunday, which this year marks the publication of the Christian Scriptures in the 1,000th tongue.

In urging the observance, the Nation's Chief Executive says that, "if evidence were needed of the continuing force and vitality of the divine word, it would be found in the recent announcement that the Bible has now appeared in more than 1,000 languages. What a tribute to the enduring strength of a spiritual message.

"And through all the ages since Moses received on Mount Sinai the Ten Commandments and the Law, and God entered into a covenant with Israel," continued Mr. Roosevelt, "men, in increasing numbers, have sought the solace, consolation and the guidance which the Bible affords. Today, after a lapse of a prodigious period of time, the power and influence of the scriptures are undiminished and destined in the light of past conquests, to permeate a never-widening sphere."

In addition to special programs in thousand Protestant churches tomorrow, there will be two Nation-wide broadcasts, the first at 1:15 p. m., over the Mutual network, when Prof. William Lyon Phelps and John H. Manson, the latter president of the American Bible Society, will speak, and the other at 2:45 p. m., over the Columbia System, when Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, the speaker, will be presented by Dr. John H. Finley, editor emeritus of the New York Times and vice president of the Bible Society.

Medical Society Seeks to Bar Term 'Trade'

Judge Asked to Tell Monopoly Jury It Isn't Subject to Act

By Dillard Stokes

The District Medical Society asked Justice Proctor yesterday to tell the grand jurors who may indict it for conspiracy that practicing medicine is not a "trade."

The request will be argued next Friday, when the Government will contend flatly that "trade" includes medicine and surgery.

The motion was filed while the extraordinary grand jury completed the eighth week of investigation of the adversities blamed by Group Health Association, Inc., on the society and the American Medical Association.

The society's initiative without waiting for a charge to be presented against it was declared to have few precedents in Anglo-American law. Attorneys George P. Hoover and William E. Leahy filed the motion for the society.

Did Not Explain the Law

They recited that the grand jury was empaneled October 17 for the sole purpose of investigating violations of the Sherman antitrust law which may have been committed by the society and A. M. A. in their struggle with G. H. A. The court did not explain the law "or the proper application thereof," they pointed out.

Not since the Sherman act was passed in 1890, the motion said, has there been any attempt to apply it to physicians, explaining "that the practice of medicine and surgery is a well-defined profession and has been recognized and accepted as such generally by the courts of the United States, including the Supreme Court of the United States; that the practice of medicine is separate and distinct from any of the callings or occupations which may be denominated 'trade.'"

Accordingly, the society said, "it is imperative that for the proper guidance of the said additional grand jury, they should be instructed by the court as herein moved."

The motion was served on District Attorney Pine and on five special assistants to the Attorney General who have been presenting the Government's evidence before the grand jury—Allan Hart, John Henry Lewin, Douglas B. Maggs, Grant W. Kelleher and Charles C. Pearce.

"We are studying the motion of the society," Hart said last night, "and we shall determine a proper course of action when the proposal is argued next week. Until then we cannot, of course, comment."

The Department of Justice position, however, was strongly indicated on December 1, when Maggs addressed a forum in Milwaukee. He then said:

"Some spokesmen for the medical societies say that there is a short, but complete, answer to the charges now being investigated by the grand jury: That the practice of medicine is a profession, not a trade.

Refer to Gainful Activities

"'The lawyers of the Department of Justice, of course, agree that the words 'a trade,' used to characterize a man's calling, indicate that calling is not entitled to the somewhat honorific appellation, 'profession.' But, they insist, carpenters, plumbers, house painters, and the like are not the only persons who are entitled to invoke the Sherman act.

"'In some contexts, the word 'trade' is used to refer to all gainful activities. The Department's lawyers believe that the restraints of trade condemned by the Sherman act include restraints placed upon the exercise by any person of the calling by which he earns his livlihood, whatever and however honorific, that calling may be. They believe that physicians are not privileged to indulge in the antisocial, coercive practices admittedly forbidden by the Sherman act to persons who follow other, less honorific, callings.

"'If this view of the meaning of the Sherman act is wrong, the courts will tell us so. In that event, it will be for Congress to decide whether to amend the Sherman act so that it will specifically mention and prohibit boycotts of physicians.

"'But the Department's lawyers think there is little chance that the courts will hold that boycotts of physicians are lawful under the Sherman act as it now reads.'"

Dowager Row May Peril Rite At Memorial

Secret Service Ready For Ruckus; President To Ply Spade Thursday

Frankly fearful that defiant dowagers will raise a ruckus that will be difficult to deal with, the Secret Service and United States Park Police yesterday began to lay plans for President Roosevelt's appearance at ground-breaking exercises for the new Jefferson Memorial, probably next Thursday.

A Secret Service detail and Capt. Patrick J. Carroll, uniformed chief of the Park Police, were at the Tidal Basin yesterday, earnestly discussing ways and means of suppressing any untoward display which might mar the ceremonies.

It was learned that three-fourths of the 80-man Park Police force will be assigned to the event, along with sizeable representations of the Secret Service and Metropolitan Police.

Reason for all the precaution is that another demonstration by Washington clubwomen opposed to removal of any Japanese cherry trees would not be a surprise. A few weeks ago, when National Capital Parks workers began transplanting some of the trees, a delegation of women chained themselves to the springtime blossom bearers and forced laborers to quit work for the day.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Columbia Light Opera Company of Washington presented Emerich Kalman's "The Countess Maritza" last night in McKinley High School auditorium, under direction of Ethel Manning. The cast:

Countess Maritza.....Donne O'Dell
Lisa.....Lydia Paterson
Manya.....Gayle Hunt
Freda.....Helen Parker
Princess Bozena...Frances Jackson
Nepomuk.....Howard Moore
Count Endrody....Irving Chandler
Lazlo.....Stanley Dombrosky
Tsheko.....Julian Parker
Capt. Stefan.....Howard Moore
Baron Zupan.....Richard Alderson
Zingo.....Florenz Hinz
Populesco.....Raymond Moore

Another success was scored by the enterprising Columbia Light Opera Company in McKinley High School auditorium last evening, when Emerich Kalman's, "The Countess Maritza" was presented with the vim that characterizes the work of the young singers. Since the first appearance of the organization on the scene two seasons ago, one has been impressed and pleased by the zest with which the performances are animated, and by the admirable spirit of comradeship which prevails among the members of the company. Not being burdened with the "star system," they collaborate without jealousies and with a hearty interest in the good of the greater number.

Thursday evening's performance of the operetta, which this chronicler was unable to attend, brought forward one cast of principals, most of whom retired last night into the chorus that others might take their places. This friendly interchange of responsibilities is but one of the evidences of the genuine fellowship that exists in the group. Another is the ease of the performance, which shows that the training has been as much a matter of cooperation as of discipline.

Thanks to the ample stage, the large chorus of gypsies, peasants, officers and aristocrats had a freedom of movement which resulted in colorful groupings. To this picturesque aspect of the production much was contributed by the prima ballerina, Marion Durbrow Venable, and her corps of 16 dancers whose frequent appearances were involved in the plot.

Emerich Kalman's tuneful score was given a spirited reading by principals and choristers, sustained by an adequate orchestra. The fresh music has a delightful Gypsy tang in its cadences, rhythms and accelerations. Now that the company has added this attractive stage piece to its repertoire, there will be other opportunities to hear it.

Crop Control Faces Vote Today

quotas would be approved by "good-sized majorities. He said it was probable, however, that the results would not be as favorable as those of last March, when cotton farmers voted 1,406,088 to 120,940 in favor of quotas for the 1938 crop.

AAA officials said they expected the tobacco vote to be close. Quotas for this year's crop won by a vote of 219,842 to 35,253. Dissatisfaction with tobacco quotas resulted in institution of a court suit to test constitutionality of the control program.

The referendum on rice quotas will be the first one for that crop.

States Enumerated

The States in which the referenda will be conducted:

Cotton—Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

Quotas Proposed

The national marketing quotas proposed by the AAA are:

Cotton—The amount produced on 27,500,000 acres which would be apportioned among growers on the basis of a formula prescribed by the farm law.

Rice—11,974,000 barrels.

Growers of burley and dark tobaccos will vote December 17 on marketing quotas for those crops in 1939.

Important Conversations

During the past few days President Roosevelt has had opportunity to get a first-hand view of the international situation from our official envoys to Germany, France and Italy, all of whom recently left their posts for visits to this country. Their reports will soon be supplemented by verbal information from Joseph P. Kennedy and Nelson T. Johnson, Ambassadors to Great Britain and China, respectively, both of whom are due in Washington in the near future.

These consultations, past and prospective, are obviously of far more than routine importance. The international situation has undergone vast and far-reaching changes during recent months. The impact of those changes on the United States has already been felt in a demand for a great expansion in American armaments, designed to make this Nation and the entire Western Hemisphere more secure.

But rearmament is not and cannot of itself be a substitute for policy. It is essential that the Government canvass thoroughly the new situation in which the United States is placed as a result of changes abroad. For obviously these changes involve developments and adaptations in the handling of foreign relations.

The President's consultations with the men representing the Nation in major foreign capitals provide the necessary preliminary in this field. Old bulwarks have disappeared. The balance of power in Europe and Asia has undergone a decided and far-reaching shift certain to affect the United States in many different ways. The time for a thorough re-examination of America's place in the world is at hand. The Administration, as a first step, must inform itself by an interchange of well-informed views on many subjects which could not be reduced to the scope of diplomatic reports.

Farm Paradoxes

The referendums to be held today in the cotton and tobacco belts should afford a real test of farm opinion on the AAA. Last year farmers were given a similar opportunity to vote on the application of drastic marketing quotas. But they had only a vague understanding of the new law, and an ardent hope for higher prices, on which to base their judgment. Today they will vote from actual experience.

Neither the tobacco growers nor the cotton growers are satisfied with the present AAA programs. There is a wide difference, however, between the reasons for their complaints. As Secretary Wallace pointed out recently: "The tobacco program is criticized because prices are good. The cotton program is criticized because prices are low." Some officials fear that tobacco controls are more in danger of repudiation because of their success than are cotton controls because of their relative failure.

That paradox is easily explained. Tobacco has brought good prices for the last five years. It is one of the few crops for which prices are above the "parity" level sought in agricultural legislation of the last few years. Growers are naturally pleased with this price situation. But many believe that it reflects the increasing use of flue-cured tobacco in cigarettes more than it does AAA crop restriction. They are inclined to think that their position would be improved if they could grow as much tobacco as they wish.

On the contrary, cotton growers realize that it is the enormous surplus of their commodity hanging over the market that has depressed prices. Undoubtedly many of them dislike the quota system, but they also know that defeat of the AAA plan would result in heavier planting next spring. A still larger surplus might have a more adverse affect upon their incomes than acreage restrictions. Farmers realize, moreover, that rejection of marketing quotas would deprive them of commodity loans next year.

If acreage-control plans are jeopardized by success as much as by failure, Congress will face an unexpected dilemma when it again turns attention to farm legislation. In the meantime, these referendums should hold a good deal of interest for the Temporary National Economic Committee. While monopolistic practices in many industries are under scrutiny, the Department of Agriculture is campaigning vigorously to secure approval of farmers for programs in restraint of trade.

This attempt to raise agricultural prices through restriction of output is part of the whole complicated economic panorama which the committee is attempting to encompass. And it is by no means the least baffling part.

A New Spirit

The resolutions adopted by the National Association of Manufacturers at its current annual convention are in marked contrast to those declarations of former years which have done much to give the organization a reactionary reputation. A new spirit is revealed in the tolerant, objective tone of this year's resolutions, and in the emphasis placed upon the responsibility of industry to co-operate with other groups and with the Government in helping to eliminate unemployment and raise living standards.

The N. A. M., properly enough, has not hesitated to criticize policies regarded by its membership as inimical to free enterprise and economic progress. Resolutions concerning the importance of preserving private enterprise and protecting it from the competition of governmental agencies have a familiar ring. But on this occasion old slogans and warnings are qualified by the acknowledgment that "time-tested principles" are not automatically applicable to present day conditions. It is admitted that adaptation is in order. And it is generally agreed that some of the New Deal policies, which the N. A. M. in the past has uncompromisingly opposed, have come to stay.

Since it last prepared a "program for American progress" the membership of the association has obviously done some practical thinking. It has realized that generalized denunciation of regulatory changes regarded as desirable by the public is futile, and furthermore deprives the objector of opportunities for discriminating criticism of specific practices and policies. That the N. A. M. has come to realize this is strongly indicated by its resolution dealing with labor relations and Government regulation of private business.

Instead of denouncing all forms of interference in labor policies the association admits a recognition by industrial management that "employes who wish to bargain collectively are entitled to do so, in whatever form they determine through their own freely chosen representatives." And instead of demanding complete freedom from Government supervision, the N. A. M. now attempts to define the type of regulation which it believes compatible with the preservation of effective private management.

There is good reason to conclude that the constructively critical tone of the program outlined for the guidance of members is partly due to a conviction that since the November elections the Administration is more disposed to deal sympathetically with the problems of private industry. While the Government's power policies leave room for doubt on this score, the hearings before the Temporary National Economic Committee have so far indicated a genuine desire on the part of the investigators to assist industry by developing a better understanding of its problems.

Senator O'Mahoney, chairman of this important inquiry, was one of the chief speakers to address the manufacturers' convention. There he stressed his belief in the value of free competitive enterprise. But at the same time he warned his audience that business cannot expect to remain entirely free from governmental interference.

The N. A. M. resolutions indicate that industry accepts the Senator's views, with certain reservations. If that is the case, representatives of the Government and leaders of industry will hereafter work more co-operatively to find a solution of social and economic problems. There is plenty of scope for such co-operation. And it is a promising sign when industrial leaders show that they are not disposed to capitalize on the evidently increasing lack of public confidence in the administrative methods of the New Deal.

Problem Of Federalism

The social security act provides that unemployment compensation must be paid, under the appropriate State law, to any otherwise eligible individual who refuses to accept a position made vacant directly because of "a strike, lockout or other labor dispute."

Recently the voters of Oregon passed a measure redefining the term labor dispute in that State so as to exclude jurisdictional conflicts between rival union groups. Now the question arises as to whether by this action Oregon has forfeited the right to have its unemployment compensation act certified by the Social Security Board.

A hearing to decide the issue has been called—the first of its kind—and the outcome will be awaited with great interest. If the board should disapprove the State law, as amended by recent legislation, it would entail the withholding of Federal funds for administrative expenses. More important, it would involve disallowance of the tax credits to which employers of insured workers are entitled under the Federal law.

It is a serious responsibility which the Social Security Board is called upon to assume in passing judgment upon the Oregon law. On the one hand, the board naturally wishes to avoid establishing a precedent that might permit the States to undermine safeguards for workers set up under the Federal law. On the other hand, the board presumably would hesitate to interfere with State efforts to suppress costly jurisdictional disputes which, especially on the West Coast, have caused great and unnecessary trouble.

The Oregon case calls attention to the tremendous influence which the board exercises over State labor legislation, through the discretionary powers conferred upon it to refuse to certify State unemployment insurance laws. That influence is not usually realized by the public because it is exerted by Federal administrators, in advance of action, to mold State legislation. Only when, as in the Oregon case, the voters act to modify an approved system does the extent of this new Federal power become fully apparent.

Washington Spokesmen

A large turnover in the membership of Congress is seldom good news for the District of Columbia. It is too likely to mean the loss of legislators experienced in local affairs, and in addition a shifting of District Committee members to other posts. So the selection of well-informed legislators to handle local bills becomes a problem in every new Congress.

Washingtonians do not like to confront the fact that most Congressmen shy away from service on District committees. Nevertheless, that is the case. Members of both the House and Senate naturally prefer service on committees dealing with legislation in which their constituents are interested. So long as Congress retains direct control over the District, however, it is important to choose capable, experienced and willing men to serve on committees charged with the formulation of local policy.

Fortunately there are some notable exceptions to the general antipathy to service on the District committees. Senator King has served long and faithfully as chairman of the Senate District Committee. Representative Kennedy has indicated that he will accept the chairmanship of the House District Committee if he can obtain appropriate assurances of co-operation from Administration leaders in the enactment of a constructive legislative program. The unselfish attitude of these men should encourage the selection of high caliber committeemen to support the chairmen.

The importance of the local problems awaiting the disposition of the Seventy-sixth Congress is a sufficient argument for the assignment of experienced men to study them. But there is one especially compelling reason why expert attention should be given to the affairs of the Nation's Capital at this time. Another attempt will soon be made to bring order out of the confusion of miscellaneous agencies that now constitute the local government.

If this task can be accomplished, Congress will in future be less burdened with legislation for Washington. Its members will be asked only to pass upon general policies to govern the municipality, much as a State legislature controls cities within its jurisdiction. That appears to be the only real solution for the annual dilemma of securing prompt and constructive Congressional action on numerous local issues in which Congressmen have little personal interest.

Optimism

The president of the Optimist International, assisted by "comedians, humorists and cartoonists," has this week thrown out what is described as "a barrage of optimism" in all the Optimist clubs in the United States and Canada, by means of phonograph records. That's giving a sick world the needle.

The members of the Optimist clubs might well call themselves the Mark Tapleys, for in the world as it is today there is assuredly some credit in being jolly. And the "comedians, humorists and cartoonists," sad fellows all, jolly well know it. Perhaps they will turn the trick. There is no knowing. People are sometimes cheered by cheerfulness. But, just as often, it is a tale of woe that will cheer them up, since it makes them feel that at least they are better off than some other fellow.

Then again it sometimes happens that a man does a better job of cleaning up when he views with alarm rather than with a cheerful spirit.

And when it comes to a charitable view of things it may be that the kindly cynic is the truest optimist, for, since he never expects too much from a faulty human nature he looks with a forgiving eye on human shortcomings.

Outside of that, there isn't a thing the matter with the plans of the gentlemen of the Optimist International. More power to them!

What Is News?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am moved to ask why The Post's front page is strongly pro-New Deal while its editorial page is unbiased and even, at times, critical of the New Deal.

Why should a political statement by Pennsylvania's Guffey be given a first-column headline on the front page of The Post? What was there that was "newsworthy" in a propaganda statement issued by a discredited Democratic wheel horse? The headline and the whole column was the rankest New Deal propaganda. Why was it on the front page?

The implication that Guffey is a liberal, contained in your statement that he is "always active in liberal ranks," is utterly ridiculous. Having lived in Pittsburgh for many years and having known Joe Guffey for almost as long, I know that he is not, and never has been, a liberal. He was and is a Democratic machine politician. The "meteoric career in the Senate" to which your writer refers is nothing more nor less than a ride on the band-wagon. Having no real convictions of his own, Joe is a ready stooge for Roosevelt and his band of unelected legislation writers. The entire statement, as reported, bristles with reactionary class-hatred and drips the usual New Deal mud. It sounds very much as though it might have been written by Charlie Michelson in the publicity department of the Democratic National Committee. But if Charles did collaborate, I believe it was without the approval of the chairman of the committee.

I am not a Republican. I am an anti-New Deal independent. I voted for Theodore Roosevelt in 1912 and I have voted for three Democrats and three Republicans in Presidential elections since that time. I did not vote for Joe Guffey in 1934 nor for Franklin Roosevelt in 1936. There is nothing in Guffey's record in Pennsylvania nor in Washington to commend him to an honest liberal. There is little in Roosevelt's record—except words—to commend him to a disinterested liberal. New Deal humanitarian phrases have worn too thin during the past five years to cover New Deal corruption.

In Pennsylvania the voters have at last come to the conclusion that the promised end does not justify any means. And I believe that it is slowly penetrating the consciousness of the average American voter that the "noble objective" of the New Deal is not, first and foremost, the more abundant life of an army of New Deal bureaucrats whose jobs, like Joe Guffey's, depend upon the continuance of the New Deal and Roosevelt in power.

Why should The Post, a supposed independent newspaper, devote a column on its front page to the furtherance of that objective?

PENNSYLVANIA LIBERAL.
Washington, Dec. 5.

Pedestrian Control

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since I shall probably be one of the first people arrested under the extraordinary projected new anti-pedestrian laws, I should like to state my stand on the matter. I am a middle-aged woman, slightly lame. I do not show my lameness if I walk with care, but sudden jumping and scurrying cause me acute pain.

Last week I tried to cross Connecticut at M street with the green light. As I reached the car tra ', it turned yellow. The car conductor stamped on his bell, threw the car forward and, as I leaped backward, he was speeding across the intersection.

I can cross safely in Washington only where there are "walk" lights or in the middle of a block where I can see in both directions and am sure no car can whirl at me : ddenly from behind.

The newspapers in Washington have often stated that numerous cities in the U. S. have pedestrian control laws. Will you please list in your newspaper those cities which provide no safe period for pedestrians to cross the streets but arrest them for crossing when they choose what seems to them the safest. MILDRED CLARK.
Washington, Dec. 8.

The Hahn Execution

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dignified jurists may assure a horrified public that by the execution of Mrs. Hahn the "ends of justice" have again been attained. But what are the ends of justice? Do they stand for anything more than vague concepts in the minds of lawyers and judges?

There is nothing vague, however, about the fact that a monstrous orgy occurred in Columbus, Ohio, last night, or that millions of civilized men and women everywhere were deeply shocked and pained by this sadistic demonstration of legal frightfulness.

Those defenders of the principle of capital punishment whose recurrent fits of righteous indignation can only be cured by the burning of human beings at the stake or in the electric chair, should bear in mind that righteous indignation is often an unconscious disguise for primitive lusts straining at the leash in the dark recesses of the human mind. J. PERLA.
Washington, Dec. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is not capital punishment a form of crime? An eye for an eye, tooth for a tooth creed should not be the philosophy of a modern intelligent society. Instead of putting the criminal to death, why not use his brain power, which is often remarkable, for good?

Crime itself is disastrous to all humanity, but misplaced justice is equally disastrous. How much better would the world be if the money spent for the punishment of criminals was spent for a clean, comfortable and Godly environment. I am sure it would make one a law-abiding, peace-loving citizen.

I am sincerely interested in people of all nations, but I am naturally most concerned about my fellow citizens of the United States. For the past five years I have traveled extensively throughout the United States producing and exhibiting religious educational moving pitcures which have aided many people in living better lives. I have visited hundreds of beauty shops, hotels, schools, jails, reformatories, etc., and from the most aristocratic meeting places such as Riverside Drive Church to the most humble little church in the country. As a conclusion of my varied observations gleaned, and my memory being refreshed after reading in The Post of a mother who must go to the chair, I write this article.

Can you visualize a fire dance in the jungle by the natives because they are about to put to death a man? Can we see ourselves through them in what we call a more civilized manner? Should we put a human being to death?

MRS. JAMES E. GIST, JR.
Washington, Dec. 7.

Aiding The Aggressor

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I hope our President and every member of Congress will read the letter by Mr. T. A. B. Barefoot on "America And Aggressor Nations" in The Post of December 8. What a "mockery" for us to pray for other suffering peoples when this country pours oil on the fires of destruction now raging in China!

America should set an example to the world to uphold all that is just, with the high ideals with which this country has been bound ever since the writing of the Constitution. What a disgrace that "the land of the free" should supply material for bombs, bullets and bayonets for the slaying of the homeless and helpless in that great empire that preferred to live at peace with the rest of the world in this time of chaos!

Dr. Wellington Koo is reported to have told the League Assembly (Post, September 17) that "not less than 1,000,000 Chinese have been killed since (the) outbreak of the Far Eastern war, July 7, 1937," and "30,000,000 Chinese wounded or made homeless." And this is the twentieth century we are living in!

We have a "neutrality" law! Is it "neutral" to aid the aggressor? If we care a particle for those in that nation formerly friendly to us, why not give all aid possible to the victims of Japan's savagery?

America cannot afford to soil her soul before the world in aiding mass murder in a friendly country—or in any other. These things may have a rebound that may endanger the foundation of our democracy, which we went to war "to make the world safe for." If our conscience cannot remain clear, such a democracy as ours will not be worth saving. And I am for democracy at its best as the best and most just form of government. My ancestors fought, bled and died for justice and liberty. May our people be worthy of what our forefathers died to preserve!

H. B. BRADFORD.
Bethesda, Md., Dec. 8.

Unemployment Study

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post for November 24 carried an excellent article by James D. Secrest entitled "Chances Slim for More Relief Funds." The article analyzed the relief situation in the District and the possibilities of securing an increase in or a supplement to the present District relief appropriation when Congress convenes. It concluded that the strongest opposition to any increase in the relief appropriation in the District will come from the report of Burdette Lewis.

That Burdette Lewis' report may be expected to oppose any increase in the District relief budget may readily be inferred from Lewis' statements to the press during the past two months. Obviously there is another side to the picture that Burdette Lewis' report will not present. It is in connection with this side that I should like to make the following pertinent suggestions:

In the past those who have appeared before the Congressional hearings on District appropriations for the unemployed largely have tended, although they had a knowledge of the actual existing situation, to base their appeals for an increase in the relief appropriation on humanistic and Christian principles. In the present case this will not be sufficient. Burdette Lewis' report presumably will be based upon factual analysis of conditions in the District. Hence it will be necessary to present facts that his report will more than likely omit from consideration. This will necessitate an analysis of the report immediately upon its publication and a marshaling of the forces in favor of an adequate and just policy toward the unemployed.

The Post Impressionist

"Ketty"

IF SHE LIVED in a different locality she might be catalogued more accurately. For example, (a) in the Deep-South as "Tobacco Road," (b) in any city as "Dead End." As it is, she escapes cataloguing completely. In fact, she is the best example of "classification trouble" that I have ever known. She slops over all intangible lines of demarcation, and she has also confounded certain physical boundary lines in her time.

Her name is "Ketty" (probably short for Keturah) and I have known about her for years. This incident should have a map sketched in at this point (like some of the up-to-date crime stories), but you can picture the scene for yourselves.

I suppose one would call Ketty a "mountain-woman," but even that description is open to debate. Anyway, at the time of which I am speaking, there was a mountain in the background. In the middle distance was her house surrounded by a weedy yard, and the State road passed in front of the yard. Across the road was one of the loveliest lakes I have ever seen. We are often told that looking at beauty creates lovely natures. Someone ought to have told Ketty this, because a lot went on around that lake to shatter the theory.

The town of Oldtown lay to the left as one faced Ketty's house, and Newton was on her right. The boundary line between them ran through Ketty's "farm," and that was where the trouble in classifying Ketty began. There was a line of pine trees to the left of Ketty's place, which the sheriff of Oldtown contended was the town line. There was also a line of Neolithic rocks on the right which Newtown people said had been set by the founders as town line. You see that the Oldtown theory placed Ketty in Newtown, and the Newtown theory placed Ketty in Oldtown. The reason for this attitude was that Ketty and Bill (her husband) and Jed (her son) were what is known in those parts as town charges (economically speaking).

Whenever Ketty would make a demand for aid on the sheriff of Oldtown, he would decide that it was cheaper to do a little surveying on the town lines than to support Ketty, especially in winter, when the town surveyor was not raising any potatoes and was glad to earn a dollar. And the same went for the sheriff of Newtown!

Most town problems which no one else wanted to tackle went to these sheriffs, who were equipped by office and nature to handle them. They appear to be the originals on which some early dramatists based their rural sheriffs, and they would have set their own mothers out in the cold without compunction. Neither was moved by pity for Ketty. Both liked the prospect of foisting ner on the other town for what promised to be cold charity. It is a sad story!

The situation became complicated by the fact that each sheriff was trying not only to get rid of Ketty but to get the best of the other sheriff. The only people making anything out of the mess were the surveyors, who were busy running rival lines most of the time.

It was as good as a circus for us to hang around the crossroads store, taking surreptitious bites of the owner's pickles and crackers, and hearing what the "sheriff of Oldtown said to the sheriff of Newtown" when they happened to meet. Their remarks were as often quoted as the conversation between the Governors of North Carolina and South Carolina, and there were as many versions. The winter was long and cold, and things were very dull. Someone ought to have voted Ketty a pension for entertainment value, but no one thought of it.

And there was another angle. Besides not knowing what town she lived in, Ketty was never able to decide whether she was entitled to aid from the Moose Lodge of Oldtown or the Elks of Newtown. Both gave to the poor, and Ketty was all mixed up about the matter. This phase became so acute that it caused a scandal.

The boys of both towns were betting on which lodge would supply Ketty a certain much-needed article, and the clergy heard about it. They said that Ketty was not only a town disgrace (provided anybody could find out what town) but that she was provoking the immoral pastime of games of chance among the young, and something must be done!

Meantime, Ketty was hurt, for she was really sensitive. She lost some weight, and her eyes had the appeal of a hound kicked from door to door. Tempers began to be worn thin, and the remarks of the rival parties were not funny, but completely acrimonious. Our sheriff called the other a robust Elizabethan name commonly applied in that locality to a certain insect, and the other could think of no better retort than "polecat," which is not locally considered as low as the other epithet. A few were talking about old family heirlooms known as shotguns. It is doubtful if any would have gone off, but it was time for something to happen to keep peace.

Came what an earlier dramatist called "the dawn of a tomorrow!" New ways were abroad in methods of helping the indigent (Ketty called it "indignant"). With the coming of a new era, Bill was put to work on a PWA dam project. Jed took his flat, expressionless countenance away to a CCC camp. Both began to send Ketty sums of cash. She was so encouraged by this phenomenon that she blossomed into quite a new person.

But no one has ever yet discovered in what town Ketty lives; and since she is not a town problem any more, nobody cares now.

The only person disgusted with the entire outcome is the surveyor!

E. DALWICK.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Ickes' Anschluss

THERE IS NO doubt that Harold Ickes, the Sudeten Chicagoan from the estranged Province of Winnetka, has been yearning for anschluss with his old home town in the role of mayor and political redeemer. There are several difficulties, however.

PEGLER

For one, Winnetka, although a province of that projected racial empire of the Chicago Tribune called Chicagoland, is not legally a part of Chicago. The Tribune's drang nach everywhere would enfold Winnetka and bless it with the peculiar form and type of government for which Chicago, under the Tribune, has been noted. This drang would anschluss also the rich beer and pumpernickel deposits of Milwaukee, the prosperous whisky wells of Peoria, the famous though now inactive literary gushers of Indianapolis and the rich Ukraine of Iowa.

But up to now the empire is only a dream of Col. Robert R. McCormick, who believes that the inhabitants of the area are, with few exceptions, Chicagoans in the racial sense and bombards them with his radio station and his editorials as Hitler bombarded the Austrians and the Sudetens.

SO, AS A resident of Winnetka, Mr. Ickes plainly is ineligible for office in Chicago, although racially he is almost a thoroughbred Chicagoan. It has been suggested that a court decision might be obtained to make him eligible, or it could be decided simply to overlook this little detail and run him for mayor, anyway.

In some communities such a suspension of the law might be viewed with alarm, but Chicago rarely pays any attention to laws, and it is hoped that the city's sense of fair play would permit Mr. Ickes to violate one by way of proving his Chicagoness.

The campaign probably would be highly acrimonious, for the Tribune long has referred to the house dick of the New Deal as "Honest Harold"—a foul aspersion in Chicago politics and a serious handicap no doubt.

TRUE, THERE have been "Honest Johns" in Chicago politics, but the word "honest" was pronounced with a smile even in print. But the Tribune has been calling Mr. Ickes "Honest Harold" in the most vindictive way, and his friends regard this as dirty pool and a mere intimation of the mudslinging that might develop. It is their contention that if a man is otherwise qualified to serve as Mayor of Chicago the mere fact of his being honest should not be held against him. He might make a good mayor, anyway, but, aside from that, honesty is largely an accident of birth, and the promoters of Ickes' candidacy hope the people of Chicago would be broadminded enough to ignore the question.

Had he known, 20 or 30 years ago, that he might one day run for mayor, Mr. Ickes might have had the political foresight to get himself indicted for stealing parkway or other public funds or for evasion of his income tax on the stolen money.

MR. ICKES HIMSELF has not yet made up his mind. He has a large job here as secretary of the Interior and access to the Naval Hospital, in which to take a rest cure when he needs one at $3.75 a day.

Yet the job of Mayor of Chicago, in the present state of Chicago's affairs, is reckoned to be second only to the Presidency of the United States, and friends of Mr. Ickes believe they could fix up a bunk and a gas jet in the mayor's office so that he could save room rent and whip up scrambled eggs for himself, perhaps for even less than $3.78 a day.

This may prove to be the final enticement, for Mr. Ickes is a man of frugal nature—another fault which might be held against him as a candidate for mayor. The taint of honesty dinned into the ears of the people will be a powerful argument, but the added and easily provable accusation of thrift seems almost too much.

MR. ICKES WAS a newspaper reporter in Chicago 40 years ago and lived there through many mayoral administrations, including that high point in Chicago's civic pride, the reign of Fred A. Busse, which is a story by itself. Rather oddly, this and similar—though slightly less glorious—eras in Chicago's history have struck apathy into the souls of the auslanders along the path of the Tribune's drang nach everywhere.

But the people of the actual city, the great, proud heart of Chicagoland, take mighty pride in their past as well as in their illustrious present. To such an electorate comes a man openly charged with honesty and economical habits whose best friend, if any, can't offer a word of refutation or excuse.

. . . 'No Lack of Merit Implied'

"We have read thy manuscript with infinite delight. By the sacred ashes of our ancestors, we swear that never have we revelled in so enthralling a masterpiece. If we printed it we should henceforth be obliged to take it as a model, as a standard of quality and achievement, and henceforth never print anything inferior to it. As it would be impossible to find its equal in 10,000 years, and we have to go to press with our poor, uninspired paper once a day, we are compelled, though shaken with sorrow and blinded with tears at the necessity, to return thy divine manuscript, and for doing so we ask a thousand humble pardons."

Military Pacts Not U. S. Aim, Berle Says at Lima Parley

Lima

that has gone so far ahead in recent years."

He was careful in stressing unity among the American States not to cut the Western hemisphere off from the rest of the world.

"The eyes of the world are fixed on the present conference," he said. "We feel the spiritual presence of all extra-continental states interested in observing the affirmation and growth of political and judicial cohesion of the 21 countries that have organized themselves to cover together the uncertain journeys of the future . . . ."

Benavides pictured the American republics as "united by the same sentiments and directed by a solid collective conscience."

Military Pacts Shunned

Berle, in his radio broadcast, said the countries of the Western Hemisphere "have not lived under a system of military alliances, nor so far as I know does any of them care to start such a system now."

He added that the United States "has never thought of proposing a military alliance."

"It is perfectly plain that the American continent does not feel that a system of military alliances is needed to protect, and on that I think everyone agrees," he said, emphatically.

The New World, he said, has something of its own to contribute to international relations, "namely, the phenomenon of co-operative peace."

The Assistant Secretary said this was "a contribution no less great because it is spiritual, rather than military, moral even more than political."

He decried the rumor that the United States "is working here to advance her own trade and commerce, and that other American nations ought to beware of American penetration."

"We are happy in having at the conference probably the most distinguished group of American statesmen ever assembled, and in having among them men who have been experienced for years in this kind of work," he concluded.

Under the Argentine mutual consultation plan American foreign ministers will meet at different capitals, in rotation, to "exchange ideas and study problems of interest to them."

In addition, foreign ministers of neighboring countries would hold "such regional meetings as they consider convenient."

The inaugural session of the conference was brief. President Benavides spoke for 40 minutes and finished by declaring the assembly open.

The United States delegation, headed by Secretary of State Hull, sat in 11 seats to the left facing the speaker.

Diplomats of the 21 countries and their ladies jammed the marble hall of the House of Representatives, where the sessions will be held for the remainder of December.

A blare of trumpets signaled the arrival of Benavides who marched to the rostrum through long files of troops standing at rigid attention. A cordon of police held back huge crowds jammed outside between the government palace and the entrance to the congress hall.

At the conclusion of Benavides' speech the congress adjourned until tomorrow afternoon when Hull, Concha and Jose Maria Cantilo, Argentine foreign minister, will speak.

It was learned from a most reliable source that Brazil expects to offer a resolution in favor of mutual assistance in case of foreign aggression in this hemisphere.

Further, it was learned, the resolution would mark the intention of the 21 nations to combat the propagation of political concepts designed to destroy national institutions.

Brazil's position as reported sponsor of the resolution was understandable because some of its recent internal disturbances were believed by many persons to have been inspired by off-continent influences.

Uniform Laws Urged

An appeal for greater uniformity in commercial laws among nations of the Western Hemisphere was made by David E. Grant, general counsel for Pan-American Airways, at a meeting of Latin-American law experts last night at the Mayflower.

In an address that was broadcast by short-wave to delegates attending the Pan-American conference at Lima, Grant said that commercial laws of the American nations were basically the same, but that formalities required in some countries made it practically impossible for certain firms to do business.

Aside from complications, he said, commercial laws of the Americas suffer in some cases from "oversimplification."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

It Seems But Yesterday

IT IS FIVE YEARS since prohibition, and statistics indicate that one-third of the people who used to drink have given it up through the passing of the competitive spirit.

Drinking is only two-thirds of what it was in the speakeasy era, investigators say, which proves that thousands gave it up when the Government stopped caring whether they got it or not.

Now that a man can get a drink without climbing a dark stairway to an unventilated room over a garage and producing a card, a mystic signal or a private knock, the desperate desire to acquire a chronic case of blind staggers seems largely to have disappeared.

Five years ago getting a glass of beer combined all the adventure, action and lawlessness of a week's visit to a mountain still, the Haymarket riots and a trip through Grant's Tomb on a motorcycle.

If you wanted whisky, it was like enlisting for a tour of duty with the Foreign Legion.

Ever since repeal, getting a drink has been no more colorful or hazardous than getting a Vienna roll. And millions of Americans are so constituted that they have no zest for a habit to which nobody objects.

Prohibition made cirrhosis of the liver a national institution, developed the delirium tremens from a small-time malady into a family habit and reduced respect for law to such a point that we even had to equip jury rooms with alcohol stills.

A man didn't go out to get a drink. He went out to assert his rights as an American citizen, establish his feeling of personal liberty, show his contempt for Pussyfoot Johnson and prove he could drink anything that would stay on his stomach, if he felt he was doing it for principle.

Get into one of those old-time speakeasies and you stayed until somebody came to identify you by photograph. Today you walk into a cafe only when you really want a drink, and you leave as soon as you realize that the stuff is no better than it used to be and costs about as much.

Five years, eh? Well, we certainly thought they'd get rid of all that bad liquor by this time.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Pattern Of Europe

EVENTS IN EUROPE this week have certainly looked rather odd. While Herr von Ribbentrop was on his way to Paris to sign a good neighbor pact, his opposite number in Italy, Count Ciano, was touching off an agitation, accompanied by threats of war, for the dismemberment of France. In the same extraordinary week Mr. Oswald Pirow, who is minister of defense in the Union of South Africa, came back to London from Berlin and Rome and announced that there would be war this next spring unless "there is a complete change of outlook within the next month or two."

LIPPMANN

If all this seems unintelligible, it is only because we have not yet learned to understand the logic which drives revolutionary imperialism and the strategy which it employs. And so, though the main pattern of current European history is, I think, clear, though every principal move for the past four years has been predicted, the whole thing is so alien to what the western nations are used to thinking and so contrary to what they prefer to think that they are continually astonished by what happens.

THE DYNAMIC CENTER of the movement is, of course, the German revolution. To those who have realized that Nazism is not just a strong, despotic, national government, but that it is a revolution, it has been increasingly clear for the past four years that Nazism has had to follow two parallel lines of development. Within Germany it has had to move to the left; that is to say, the moderate Nazis had to oust and destroy the older conservatives who, at the beginning, shared the power with them, and the moderate Nazis had to be replaced by the more extreme Nazis. This movement to the left had to become more rapid and violent as the social structure of the older Germany broke down, and the accumulated substance was used up. And then as the extremists rose to power, they were bound by their own necessities to set forth on a campaign of imperial conquest.

As the leader of this revolution, Hitler's problem has been to devise the grand strategy of conquest so as to achieve always the maximum gain at the point of minimum resistance. For if, like the Russian Communists, when they sent their armies against Poland, he had miscalculated the resistance, the Nazi revolution would probably have collapsed. The Communists were driven back from the gates of Warsaw, but they were able to survive this defeat, because they had the great empty spaces of Russia into which they could retire; yet even in Russia the rule held true that a revolution which cannot expand outwardly becomes a dreadful thing internally and that the revolutionary leaders perish. The failure of communism to expand into Europe was followed by famine, massacre, deportations, forced labor, and executions involving literally millions of human beings. Hitler's task has been to avoid being checked, as Lenin was checked, so that the revolutionary pressure within Germany would not become unmanageable.

HE MADE ONE false move at the beginning. He attacked Austria in the summer of 1934 before he had properly prepared his strategical position, and he had to retreat under threat of force. But from that time until Munich he has been as brilliant a strategist as was Napoleon in his best days. His first move was to break the military connection between France and her eastern allies. That was done by the re-occupation of the Rhineland. His second move was then reasonably safe, and he took Austria. Having taken Austria, he had the Czechs surrounded on three sides, he had France isolated from the Czechs, and he had Italy as a captive ally. For with his army in Austria, Hitler commands the plains of Lombardy, and Italy's freedom of action is lost. He then destroyed the independence of Czechoslovakia, and the influence of France and Italy in central Europe.

However much one may dislike all this, it would be foolish to deny that this campaign has been a work of genius. It is in the field of diplomacy a campaign comparable only with the great military campaign in which Napoleon conquered central Europe.

But, like Napoleon after Austerlitz, Hitler has won a campaign, but he has not yet won his war. For in themselves Austria, Czechoslovakia, and even Hungary and Rumania as well are only pawns. Hitler himself has said, and there is no reason to doubt that he was speaking the truth, that his objective is the rich land of southern Russia. That has always been the great goal of pan-Germanism; that is what the pan-Germans before Hitler tried to get in 1917 when they had defeated Russia in the World War, and everything that has happened since Munich indicates that it is into the Ukraine that Hitler intends to go.

IF WE FIX THAT clearly in mind and then study the map of Europe, we shall understand such apparently strange and contradictory happenings as Herr von Ribbentrop's goodwill visit to Paris, Italy's excitement about Tunis, and Mr. Pirow's pessimism about a war in the spring.

The map will show us that the military road into southern Russia does not run through Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and Rumania. It runs through Poland, and it may be predicted with reasonable certainty, therefore, that, whatever sideshows there may be in Hungary and Rumania, the main theater of the next major crisis in eastern Europe will be Poland, and that the disintegration and dismemberment of the Polish state is now in the making. It will be an operation like that on Czechoslovakia, though on a grander scale; it will again be a movement "to liberate oppressed minorities." The principal oppressed minority will be the Ukrainians of Polish Galicia, though there will also be German minorities to be liberated, and then, of course, there will be anti-Semitism with Poland to distract and confuse and divide the Poles.

The Polish crisis is as clearly in the making today as was the Czechoslovakia crisis last April.

BUT BEFORE THIS crisis can safely be brought to a head, and before Hitler can dare to move his forces through Poland and into Russia, he must make certain that he will not be caught in a European war. He cannot afford to get himself entangled in a Polish-Russian adventure if there is any serious risk that France and Britain will seize the opportunity to recover what they lost at Munich. Napoleon made the crucial mistake of entering Russia while England remained formidable in his rear, and Hitler cannot afford to repeat that mistake.

Therefore, as a preliminary to the main action through Poland toward Russia, a diplomatic campaign in the west is necessary. The pact with France, which happens to suit the immediate internal needs of the Daladier government, has considerable value for Hitler because of its effect on the Poles. As they read it, they will see that it seems to foreclose help from France when the time comes for Poland to decide whether to resist or to capitulate and be dismembered. And so, whereas the Czechs thought they had allies until it was too late, the Poles know in advance they have no allies.

HOWEVER, this in itself does not make the enterprise secure. For as long as there is a powerful French army in being, the risks of entering Russia remain very great. So it is necessary to neutralize the French army, and this task has been allotted to Mussolini. By threatening France in Tunis, Corsica, Nice, Savoy, and from her rear in Spain, he may compel the French army to stand on the defensive on so many different fronts that it is immobilized, and has no real weight in Europe. That Mussolini hopes to get something out of it all is probable but the real stakes are not bits of territory in Africa. The fundamental object of the maneuvers is to make certain that the Polish-French and Russian-French alliances will not become effective.

If the maneuver succeeds, if the French army is pinned down on the Siegfried Line, on the Italian border, on the Spanish border, in Corsica, and on the Tunis-Libyan frontier, then Britain will no longer have a foothold in Europe. For Britain has no army, and the British navy can count decisively in Europe only if it is the means for putting the resources of the world behind an army on the continent. To immobilize the French army is, therefore, to neutralize the British navy as an offensive force in Europe.

THIS, unless I am greatly mistaken, is the general pattern that current events are following.

Crash Cures Lunatic But Driver Goes Mad

Alessandria, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Roberto Brugna, 22, agreed to escort his neighbor, Albino Acerbo, 31, to an insane asylum.

Going around a sharp curve, Brugna's car skidded and smashed into a motor lorry. Both he and Acerbo were injured and taken to a hospital.

A Soviet Parallel

Sit-Down Strikes

ONE MORE STEP has been taken in the progress of the sit-down strike toward final decision before several tribunals—before the National Labor Relations Board, before the Supreme Court, before Congress when it meets in January, and before public opinion.

SULLIVAN

With respect to the Labor Board, decision has already been made. The Labor Board upholds the sit-down strike. The Labor Board says it does not uphold all sit-down strikes but only those in which, as the Labor Board holds, the employer has been guilty of an "unfair labor practice." The distinction is not material. The Labor Board has upheld some sit-down strikes, and by doing so has upheld the principle of the sit-down strike.

The latest action of the Labor Board, taken this week, is to order the Douglas Aircraft Co. to reinstate, with back pay, 11 employes who had participated in a sit-down and who, for so doing, had been indicted, tried and convicted of violation of a California law. The offense of which they were convicted was "conspiracy to commit forcible detainer."

This Labor Board decision in the Douglas case will be appealed to a Federal district court. Whatever the decision in the district court, it will be appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States.

MEANWHILE THERE is already before the Supreme Court another case involving the sit-down. In the plant of the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation of Chicago, the leaders of a C. I. O. union "decided to take over and hold two of the company's buildings." An Illinois court ordered the sit-downers to leave the buildings. The sit-downers refused. They resisted attempts of the sheriff to arrest them. Finally, "after a pitched battle, the strikers were ousted and placed under arrest."

In this Fansteel case, as in the Douglas one, some of the sit-downers were tried for offense against the law. The offense, in this case, was resisting the order of the court. Thirty-seven were convicted, fined and imprisoned. Subsequently the Labor Board decided that the Fansteel Corporation must reinstate all the sit-downers who wished to return. I quote: "The National Labor Relations Board hereby orders that the Fansteel Corporation . . . shall offer to those employes who went on strike . . . immediate and full reinstatement to their former positions."

NLRB put its decision mainly on the ground that the Fansteel company had itself, in NLRB's judgment, broken the law in that it had refused to recognize and bargain with the C. I. O. union.

The decision of the Labor Board reinstating strikers in the Fansteel plant was appealed by the Fansteel Corporation to a Federal court in Illinois. The Federal Court, by a 2 to 1 decision, held against the Labor Board. From this decision the Labor Board has appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States. The case is now before that body.

ASIDE FROM the legal principle involved in the sit-down cases, there is a principle of, so to speak, the organization of society. Clearly, if employes can seize and hold a plant temporarily, they can seize and hold it for a period longer than temporary. Between temporary holding and permanent holding, the principle is the same. Whether industry can be carried on successfully under such condition is for anyone to judge.

Seizure and holding of plants, if done simultaneously throughout the country and if continued permanently would be a close parallel to the method by which the Russian Soviets took over industry in the revolution in that country. Probably few of those who have led or participated in sit-down strikes in America have had consciously in mind the parallel between their action and the Communist principle of society. Probably none have contemplated holding the plants permanently. Probably all have used the sit-down strike merely as a device like any ordinary strike, a device for enforcing ordinary labor demands having to do with wages, hours, bargaining and the like.

A MAN FAMILIAR with this field, Mr. John P. Frey, head of an important division of the American Federation of Labor, in testimony before the Dies committee investigating un-American activities, described the sit-down strike as being "used by the Communists in our country as a training camp in which Communists can become familiar with the tactics they are to apply when their revolutionary program is put into action . . . in which the mass revolutionists of the future are to receive experience and training to equip them for the day when the signal for revolution is given."

About the accuracy of this statement of fact and judgment by Mr. Frey the present writer has no knowledge except that Mr. Frey is a reliable person. Regardless of that, it is clear that if the sit-down strike is incorporated permanently into the tactics of labor disputes in America, and if it is incorporated into the body of accepted law, in such event something revolutionary will have happened.

Today At Lima

By Barnet Nover

The Ghost At The Feast

THE LIMA conference has begun in an atmosphere of friendliness and good will which augurs well for its success. But now, as at all times in the past, there is a ghost at the Pan American feast. That ghost is Europe.

NOVER

In the era of Bolivar and Monroe the ghost was the Europe of the Holy Alliance, the totalitarian axis of its day, whose activities threatened the newly won independence of Spain's former colonies and the security of the United States.

Later, there was the Europe of the Parisian boulevards and the German universities, the Europe to which Latin America, like the United States, was and is still bound by a thousand racial, cultural, sentimental and economic ties. In those days the strong lines of interdependence ran east and west, across the Atlantic, rather than north and south, across the Isthmus. Pan Americanism then was little more than a banquet phrase.

STILL LATER, there was the Europe of Geneva. The Monroe Doctrine, the Spanish-American War, the big stick policy of the first Roosevelt, dollar diplomacy had aroused considerable alarm in Latin America, regarding the aims and ambitions of the "Colossus of the North." The League of Nations looked like a heaven-sent foil to the United States and the republics to our south flocked to Geneva in search of aid and comfort.

Now there is the Europe of Hitler and Mussolini, of the Rome-Berlin axis and the Munich peace. And that Europe is present both in spirit and in flesh at the deliberations at Lima.

LIKE THE OLD Holy Alliance of Metternich and Alexander I, the new holy alliance of Hitler and Mussolini casts a grim shadow across the Atlantic. The immediate threat of the totalitarian powers, so far as this hemisphere is concerned, may be exaggerated; but it cannot be discounted. The aggressor nations are on the march and there is no telling in which directions they may move during the next months and years. Three of the six continents—Asia, Africa, Europe—have felt the impact of their expansionist ambitions. Is there any reason to believe they will stop short of this hemisphere?

The answer must be in the negative. It is imperative, therefore, for us and for the other nations of the New World to take counsel as to the measures that are necessary to meet the potential threat from overseas. It is no secret that this problem of defense looms large at Lima.

THE PROBLEM is not easy of solution. Despite the good neighbor policy so assiduously and, on the whole, so successfully pursued by the present Administration, the suspicions that once prevailed in Latin America regarding the United States have not wholly downed.

At best these suspicions are dormant; the embers can easily be fanned into flames; and it is a safe bet that the powers against whom barriers are being erected in this hemisphere are doing all they can to fan them. Nor must it be forgotten that in the view of certain neighboring governments and statesmen the wisest policy is one of not putting all their eggs in one basket, even one attractively decorated in the colors of Pan Americanism.

MEXICO offers a case in point. Unable to dispose of the oil from expropriated wells in the accustomed markets she has made a deal with the Third Reich, which has undertaken to purchase a considerable quantity of that oil. In return, Mexico is to receive a small amount of cash, with the balance in German products. It does not appear that this transaction has any ideological implication. In other words, its significance is economic, rather than political. But Mexico's surly attitude toward refugees seeking haven within her borders suggests that the Nazi virus is at work below the Rio Grande.

In the days when the League of Nations was the alternative to Pan Americanism, two could play at the Geneva game. It was always open to this country to join the League and thus automatically prevent Geneva from being used as a possible base for anti-United States activity by the Latin American republics.

The League is now in a state of suspended animation, and it is significant that its greatest proportionate loss of membership from any area of the world was that from Latin America.

The most powerful foil to the United States in Latin America today is the Berlin-Rome axis.

THIS DOES NOT mean that the other republics of this hemisphere are prepared to rush into the arms of Hitler and Mussolini to avoid the embraces of Uncle Sam. They are not. At the moment, the United States does not threaten their security, their institutions, their culture, in any way; the totalitarian nations do. But the threat is neither so direct nor so immediate, for the great majority of them, that they need worry unduly over it. Tomorrow the story may be quite different. But today certain advantages may be derived from playing Berlin-Rome against Washington, and Washington against Berlin-Rome.

We are not in the same position. It is to our self-interest to keep this hemisphere safe from totalitarianism, and to prevent in the New World an extension of the Munich peace which has played ducks and drakes with the Old. But for us, too, there is nothing to be gained, and much to be lost, by putting all our eggs in the Pan American basket. For isolation is as dangerous for a hemisphere as it is for a nation. In giving emphasis to this fact in the speech he made on the eve of the opening session at Lima, Secretary Hull has shown that he is aware of the realities of the situation, both with respect to the attitude of other American republics and with respect to our own needs.

Roosevelt Arouses Hope For Early Seaway Treaty

Holds Other Transportation Interests' Fears Of Competition Groundless; Forecasts Benefit To Millions Along Border

By the Associated Press.

A Presidential expression of hope for an early Canadian-American agreement gave fresh impetus yesterday to plans for developing the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway.

Mr. Roosevelt told officers of the National Seaway Council he had been convinced for years that the project "would prove second to none it its direct contribution to the economic welfare of millions of people on both sides of the border."

The next definite step in the long negotiations for a waterway treaty apparently must be taken by Canada, however. The State Department forwarded to the Canadian government last May a copy of a draft treaty which would be acceptable to the United States.

So far as is known, Canada has made no formal reply, although the waterway was mentioned when W. L. MacKenzie King, Canadian premier, called on Mr. Roosevelt recently.

As outlined last May, the project would cost $543,429,000, of which the United States would pay $272,453,000 and Canada $270,976,000.

Officers of the seaway council who called on the President were Fred J. Froestone, president; John C. Beukema, chairman of the executive committee; William George Bruce, vice president, and R. F. Malia, secretary.

Calls Opposition Selfish

New York, Dec. 9.—The complete text of Anthony Eden's address to the National Association of Manufacturers tonight follows:

I have always appreciated the support of the National Seaway Council in my efforts to assure the early undertaking of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence project. History shows that it has been the grand persistence of such organizations as yours which has ultimately enabled the country's leaders to overcome selfish opposition to great undertakings.

For many years it has been my sincere conviction that the St. Lawrence project would prove second to none in its direct contribution to the economic welfare of millions of people on both sides of the border. It has seemed to me a logical continuance of the co-operation between two peoples which has afforded an almost unique example of the possibility of achieving peace among nations.

In my message of January 10, 1934, requesting consideration of the earlier treaty, I expressed the belief that fears the St. Lawrence project would work to the disadvantage of other transportation agencies were groundless. I am more than ever convinced of that fact today. In the vast system of interdependence of which we are all parts, selfishness works inevitably to the disadvantage of any group seeking to preserve its special position by blocking the opportunity of others to enjoy the full use of nature's resources.

The economic story of this continent is an extraordinary record of the extent to which stimulus to economic growth in one region reacts to the benefit of all. Any area which has grown in economic importance becomes a greater market for the products of other regions. More products are exchanged and all transportation agencies participate in the growing prosperity.

The two nations, Canada and the United States, share a great water resource which is today only partially used. Removal of the barriers to its full use for navigation will release millions of horsepower of cheap hydro-electric energy in sections in which the rapidly growing market for power will soon overtake present sources of supply.

Failure to take advantage of this cheap power will not only tend to cramp industrial development but will force the substitution of more costly power with the resulting burden on consumers of electricity. In an age so dependent upon transportation and power serious consequences will follow to anticipate future requirements.

In view of the importance of these considerations, I am very hopeful of an early agreement between the Canadian government and our own.

Toughies Are In Society on Keith Screen

Amusing Comedy Is Hit With Crowd; Disney Scores Again

"LITTLE TOUGH GUYS IN SOCIETY." Universal picturization of a screen play by Edward Eliscu and Mortimer Offner, featuring Mischa Auer, Mary Boland and Edward Everett Horton, with Helen Parrish, Jackie Searl, Frankie Thomas, Harold Huber, David Oliver, Hally Chester, David Gorcey, Harris Berger, William Benedict and Charles Duncan. Directed by Erle C. Kenton. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

There'll probably be a "Little Tough Guys" series of pictures—if the boys can keep the pace they're setting in "Little Tough Guys" and "Little Tough Guys in Society," now sprinting across the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater.

These rowdy kids just have to be themselves to be good. They're as natural as a bunch of puppies, as real as the year 1938. True, their comedy bears the stamp of the back streets and the waterfront, but it's genuine fun, for all that. When the boys start a-rolling, they really go. Also, they show all the stigmata of born picture-stealers. Put on the screen with Garbo, we'll give odds that the kids would steal four out of five scenes.

Modern as today's newspaper, also durable and fast moving, "Little Tough Guys in Society" is full of laughs; ought to make neighborhood movie managers very happy. The boys are catapulted into a ritzy setting where they raise 16 kinds of mischief, leave bridge parties in a state of arrested hysteria and generally take things apart. But when a hold-up is attempted, the tough little guys rally to the defense of their hostess (whom they esteem as a pretty nice old doll, after all), and there is one of the finest drawing-room free-for-alls you'll ever see. In the windup, the boys rate as little heroes, with lop-sided haloes, and are seen returning to their East Side homes—but with certain angles of the ending left (probably on purpose) slightly up in the air. This last leaves the way open for another "Tough Little Guys" picture—which would seem to be a good idea.

Four Stars in Cast

Four of Hollywood's best show people give added point and seasoning to the picture. They are Mary Boland, as the bewildered but hopeful hostess of the three little tough guys; Mischa Auer, playing a psychiatrist; Edward Everett Horton, as an elegant butler, and Harold Huber, who turns in another of his slick gangster impersonations. Jackie Searl again has one of those meanie roles he's been doing since he was knee-high to a gosling.

The fun in "Little Tough Guys in Society" doesn't spring from lines so much as situations and the boys' mannerisms. Thus the kids are funny when they go society and do the Lambeth walk, even funnier when they dance hot rhythm style with each other, funniest when they dance coyly with the butler. Big moment of the show is when one of the kids foils a holdup man by crashing a bass drum over his head. There's nothing subtle about "Little Tough Guys in Society," but it will keep audiences happy.

Cartoon Is Important

Walt Disney's new "Barnyard Symphony" is just about as important as the feature. It shows Disney at his best in his newer mode, which seems to include rather lovely backgrounds as well as broad comedy. All the barnyard characters are alluringly done—the colt and his mamma, the calf and his mamma, the timid lamb, the cute chicks, the parading geese. Hero of "Barnyard Symphony" is a noble red and black rooster. Heroine is a white pullet, the most alluring creature you've ever seen, combining the charm of Claudette Colbert and Hedy La Marr. The climax is Mr. Disney's idea of an operatic symphony as done by all the barnyard citizens. It's stupendous.

A picturization of life on a dude ranch is not only descriptive, but beautifully photographed. It's enough to make you think twice about spending your vacation money on a dude ranch or a Bahama cruise. There's a musical short featuring Phil Harris, but this is rather an ache, except for some good bugling. Maestro Harris should stick to his maestro-ing and not go romantic.

Little

It seems that International Cinema Festivals create strange fellows. Just after sinister Peter Lorre had wound up his ghastly career as the child murderer of Duesseldorf at the Little Theater yesterday afternoon, Will Rogers captured the audience with his pithy humor, a welcome relief from the tension of "M," the revival of that excellent film which had preceded it on the Little's screen.

"Life Begins at Forty," filmed in 1935, was the "great American comedy," which the management promised as a companion to Fritz Lang's pre-Hitler masterpiece of 1932. Yesterday afternoon's audience got an unusual amount of pleasure from the inimitable Will, chuckling delightedly at his pointed remarks which, contrary to the habit of such things, are quite as fresh now as three years ago. While Will drawled along, as the editor of a small-town paper, to get to the truth of a bank robbery—"the way any good newspaperman should"—one was proud that this man so humorous even now, should have been so widely appreciated during his lifetime. It was the appreciation of true worth.

Slim Summerville, Sterling Holloway, George Barbier, Richard Cromwell and Rochelle Hudson are in the supporting cast of this light comedy.

"M" is a startling man hunt for a mad murderer wanted for child killings. The police are after him, and so is the underworld, for he is making their haunts too hot to hold them. Directed expertly by Fritz Lang and brilliantly acted by Peter Lorre, it is a memorable work. While it was made in German, it is interesting to note that the original sound has been dubbed out and English voices dubbed in, a device employed in Italy today, where sound films in other than the mother tongue are frowned upon. It proves a painless method of translating foreign films and one, for the most part, scarcely perceptable.

It is a full and interesting bill which closes the second week of the Little's ambitious Festival.

Luise Rainer Heads Able Cast in Romance; Collins & Peterson Headline Vaudeville

"DRAMATIC SCHOOL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Hungarian play, "School of Drama," by Hans Szekely and Zolton Egyed, adapted to the screen by Ernest Vajda and Mary C. McCall, jr., starring Luise Rainer, with Alan Marshall, Paulette Goddard, Lana Turner, Anthony Allan, Henry Stephenson, Genevieve Tobin, Gale Sondergaard, Melville Cooper, Erik Rhodes, Virginia Grey, Ann Rutherford, Hans Conreid, Cecilia C. Callejo, Margaret Dumont, Frank Puglia and Dorothy Granger. Directed by Robert B. Sinclair. Previewed Tuesday, December 6. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

There is a strange combination of dramatic ingredients to be found in "Dramatic School," revealed for the first time in Washington on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater yesterday. Primarily, the story is an engaging study of the character of a young factory worker with a tremendous urge to become a great actress. Into its warp and woof, however, have been woven Cinderella - like touches of fairy-esque imagery that lend the picture an elfin quality quite out of harmony with its more vigorous and harsher periods of dramatic recital. The effect is that of attempting to weld qualities that are less cohesive than they might be. They don't quite stick together.

BELL

This defect, if it be a defect, seems to spring from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's conviction that Luise Rainer, cast in the stellar role, must, perforce, be preserved as the screen's foremost symbol of ethereal quaintness. It would be pleasant, just once, to see Miss Rainer relieved of the necessity of being always the imaginative and put-upon child of wish-fulfilment dreams and an ingenuous saccarinity not entirely compatible with the rugged business of manufacturing gas meters, for example.

Suggests "Stage Door"

In structure and intent, "Dramatic School" is perhaps more suggestive of "Stage Door" than any other picture of recent vintage. It centers its major movement in the rather widely accepted view that great actresses are born and not made, and that they will inevitably achieve their goal in the face of all obstacles. That is what Miss Rainer, in the mildly pathetic role of Louise, does in her present vehicle. The manner in which all of the innocent little white lies she tells her companions in the factory and her fellow students in the dramatic school come true frequently places the picture well within the realm of pure fantasy. It doesn't mix too well with the more realistic intervals of the drama.

The scene opens with a lesson in pantomime, poise, carriage and the like in the classroom of the National Academy of Dramatic Art, in France. The despised member of the enrollment is Louise, given to unfathomable abstractions, overwhelming drowsiness and an apparent indifference to the one activity of her life she loves most. Working all night at the bench and studying all day at the academy are not conducive to alertness. As an escape from her own deprivation and the loneliness of her life, she invents prodigious romances with titled millionaires and grand ladies and gentlemen of society's upper crust. By a strange miracle, these all become actualities and Louise, finally, is hailed as the great artiste she has always felt herself, in her heart, to be.

This major development is hedged about with a wide divedsity of embellishments, ranging from the petty jealousies and romantic intrigues of her companions in the drama classes to a touch of life in the gay night spots of Paris. It is all handsomely staged, efficiently acted and beautifully photographed. It is merely that it all is a little too fantastic to ring true.

Old Stars and New

Miss Rainer, as goes without saying, is quietly and effectively demure and forlorn in a role that permits her to read a few lines from "Romeo and Juliet" and the trial scene from "Joan of Arc" to demonstrate that, after all, she was the Academy's prize pupil, to be known after her eventual tour de force as La Mauban—just like Duse, Bernhardt and Modjeska. She is surrounded by a cast predominantly youthful, which still includes the names of many able veteran players—among them Henry Stephenson, as the president of the Academy; Gale Sondergaard, as the great actress who has slipped from the heights and become the persecutor of her most competent pupil through envy; Margaret Dumont and Genevieve Tobin, an unwitting benefactor of the gas meter artiste.

Among the youngsters in the cast, high honors must be accorded Lana Turner, Virginia Grey, Ann Rutherford, Anthony Allen, Marie Blake and Rand Brooks for excellent performances. Paulette Goddard, in the "cattiest" role in the play, acquits herself with competence that never approaches brilliance. Marie Blake, as Annette, Louise's factory chum, outpaces her by vast distances.

Collins and Peterson a Riot

The stage bill at the Capitol this week is completely dominated by those two amiable zanies, Marty Collins and Harry Peterson, although there are numerous other clever artists on the vaudeville program. Collins and Peterson, as usual, act as masters of ceremonies as well as headline comedians of the goings-on. Most of the time, they are working practically in the audience's lap, from the ramp in front of the orchestra pit. They bring along a wealth of new material this time—presented in the same old way—and were a smash hit yesterday afternoon, with their chatter, their music, their dancing, their acrobatics and their incorrigible informality.

They introduce a lot of clever people. They welcome Chester Hale's 24 Capitol Comets "back home" in a series of striking new routines and then put on the Philharmonics, a sextet of young men who do marvelous things with harmonicas — including Raymond Scott's "Powerhouse" descriptive number. Bea Saxon is a taffy-blonde singer as far off the beaten track as from here 'way over to there. Her special arrangements of "Melancholy Baby," "You Made Me Love You" and Berlin's "I Love a Piano" are as unique as her amazing manner of singing them. Her style is all-embracing. Boy Foy, a juggler on a unicycle, is a revelation of dexterity and equilibrium that no stage ever has matched. "Wizard" should be the word for him.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's rousing medley overture, ranging from classics to swing, complete an entertainment of more than casual worth.

Columbia

Presented for another week downtown, at the Columbia, is Frank Lloyd's "streamlined" production of "If I Were King," in which Ronald Colman swashbuckles in his most polished manner as Francois Villon, poet of the shadowy slums of Paris during the reign of Louis XI.

It is rumored that Colman's is not so dynamic as some other portrayals of the same role in silent films, but there is absolute unanimity on one phase of the present version. That is upon the excellence of Basil Rathbone's portrait of the idiosyncratic king, who lifts the gutter poet to the heights for a week, giving him a taste of royal life by appointing him deputy commissioner.

For romance there is piquant Ellen Drew, fiery paramour of the rhymster in his native haunts, who dies for France in the grand manner, and Frances Dee, court lady, with whom Villon falls in love and to whom he addresses some of his most lilting verses.

For some fancy cape-swirling, for scenes of unparalleled eye-gouging in old-time street fighting, for glimpses of medieval torture methods, and, finally, for Rathbone's fine portraituring, this picture is superlatively worth seeing.

Personally, we like Colman in anything, caviling at no historical distortion in order to see him. Admittedly there are frailties in the plot, bolstered up only by the sheer personal magnetism of Colman and Rathbone. Highly photogenic Ellen Drew seems a superior heroine to the hanky-shredding Miss Dee, and dies regrettably soon.

Chalk this up as another successful, semihistorical tale, which is as good as your own taste shall decide.

Short subjects are assorted and diverting.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 9.—Whatever you do, don't miss "Dark Rapture." That's the picture which got the reputation of being so naughty when we saw it in private projection rooms out here. One scene, which of course they had to cut, was a religious operation on young boys—who weren't permitted to utter a sound. One out of five died. The picture is mopping up all over. If you want to see natives that are natives—this is it. After looking at this, our feeble attempts at going native are like so much warmed-over pap.

HEDDA HOPPER

Rather startling news that Metro paid Norma Shearer $1,000,000 to keep her in pictures so soon after her interview about how poor she was. And in "Idiot's Delight" she's an acrobat who goes phoney with a Russian accent, but sounds like Greta Garbo. While in the same studio, not working, they have the real thing—Greta.

Since May Robson's illness, she's been busier than a bird dog with fleas. While still in "Yes, My Darling Daughter" she was signed in "Broadway Cavalier"—and, with the contract Director Lew Seiler gave her a bicycle. May's learning to ride—and that's a tip for you 75-year-old youngsters!

Young Jimmy Ellison is a persistent guy. Never steps on a boat without becoming seasick, so he bought one in order to lick the mal de mer. Now he's sicker—and worse—he's stuck with a boat!

Ian Hunter has no sympathy for Jimmy—for Ian's 30-foot yacht lies idle in Santa Monica Bay while he works merrily in one picture after the other. Tough—there are some people in this town who are actually reduced to living on their yachts.

LeRoy Prinz sent 24 of his dancing girls to Rio de Janeiro four years ago. Sixteen have married, not well, but wonderfully. Each year they have a reunion, and the remaining girls come away from the party with thousands. When the twenty-fourth is married, they're going to make LeRoy president of the burg.

Walter Pidgeon is in San Francisco—says he's showing his daughter the town. Ho, hum—that isn't what I've heard!

My 3-month-old baby dachshund—Cooper, son of Wolfie—looked so unhappy as I was leaving the house that I tucked him under my coat and sneaked him in with me when I saw Disney's "Ferdinand the Bull." I thought he was sleeping peacefully, but he must have been peeking, 'cause now he goes into the garden and comes out prancing with a dry daisy in his mouth—looking for all the world like Ferdie in the bull ring.

Virginia Bruce is going to have an excuse to attend the opening of Santa Anita—her Wildtree runs in the Christmas handicap. One of Bing Crosby's horses will also run—but he still bets that the noble percherons who tote the starting gate will come in first.

I'm afraid I let a mouse out of the bag—a Disney mouse. When Artist Betty Bassett married Clif Shirpser it was supposed to be a secret, but Disney read about it in this column and called Betty into the office. She hesitantly admitted it was true and was greeted with a surprise—he doubled her salary. A sweet present for keeping a secret.

For the first time in their lives the Ritz brothers are not fighting for the title role. Their next picture's called "The Gorilla."

Play of Theater Has Its Moments; 'Trip to Miami' Is Stage Revue

"COMET OVER BROADWAY." Warner Brothers picturization of the story by Faith Baldwin, adapted to the screen by Mark Hellinger and Robert Buckner, starring Kay Francis, with Ian Hunter, John Litel, Donald Crisp, Minna Gombell, Sybil Jason, Melville Cooper, Ian Keith, Leona Marical, Ray Mayer, Vera Lewis, Nat Carr, Edward McWade, Clem Bevans, Linda Winters, Jack Mower and Jack Wise. Directed by Busby Berkeley. Reviewed Friday morning. At the Earle Theater.

It is to the everlasting credit of Miss Kay Francis that she is willing to lend earnestness and sincerity to her performances in the "B" pictures with which her studio has seen fit to equip her in recent months as a sort of "punishment" for something or other.

"Comet Over Broadway," adapted from Faith Baldwin's story of the same name, is rather the best of the lot she has had in late months. Miss Francis makes it as vital and convincing as the script provided by Mark Hellinger and Robert Buckner will permit. They have seen fit to contrive a story that confines itself to the results of a fine actress' triumphs over circumstances and self, without disclosing the more dramatic causes of those triumphs. When small-town Eve Appleton progresses from a carnival company and amateur theatricals to burlesque, Broadway and a London success, none of those successes is ever shown on the screen. Had they been, "Comet Over Broadway" might have been a vehicle to cheer the heart of any star.

As it is, we see a valiant struggle against adversity and love, waged by a young woman who has sworn to secure her husband's liberation from a life sentence in prison for a murder that was more her fault than his—although both were innocent of any premeditation of crime. Without the drama back of the footlights that it might have contained, the film still manages to hold interest as an honest and sacrificial love story. It reflects the most natural and most realistic work Miss Francis has done before the cameras within recent memory.

A Conscientious Cast

The star—billing as a featured player, along with several others in her cast, is another of the penalties for whatever it was Miss Francis did to offend her producers—is surrounded by players who salvage every atom of worth there is in their play. Ian Hunter, as the lover whose money and power in the theater are not enough to win Eve Appleton away from her pledge; John Litel, in the comparatively small role of the husband; Minna Gombell, as a passe burlesque "queen;" Ian Keith, Melville Cooper, Ray Mayer, Leona Marical, Vera Lewis and Donald Crisp all contribute more of artistry to the picture than it is worth in its present abridged form. Little Sybil Jason, as Eve's small daughter, demonstrates remarkable ability as a child actress in a role almost as exacting as that of any of her adult associates.

The Messrs. Hellinger and Buckner, at least, had the good judgment to give their camera drama an heroic and courageous ending. Miss Francis and the diminutive Miss Jason are trudging up the prison road, away from their true love and to the rescue of their husband and father, as the film fades out.

The studio almost made the mistake of giving Miss Francis a fine picture in this one.

The "Trip to Miami" revue, rigged up by Producer Harry Anger for the stage at the Earle this week, is a colorful and diversified offering that introduces the 16 Earle Roxyettes in more new and intricate routines and has Tom Howard and George Shelton as its headliners. Mr. Howard was a trifle too stentorian for comfort through the microphone yesterday afternoon, but his monologue, with persistent interruptions by the amusing Mr. Shelton, came out right side up—that side was the comic—to a roar of audience enthusiasm for their drollery.

Novelties on Stage

Dave Monohan and a blonde partner followed the Roxyettes' opening with a demonstration of unusual skill as xylophonists. Mr. Monohan plays with both his hands and his feet and achieves some unique effects. His footwook is not always as good as his handiwork, but the total effect is all in his favor. Goodrich and Nelson, two muscular young men in difficult acrobatics and handstands are another team who scored with the customers yesterday. It must be tough going through their routine four times a day!

A voice of exceptional charm was displayed by Evelyn Case, toward the end of the proceedings, in a group of well chosen and tuneful songs that veered away from "swing" and scored as pure melody.

The finale of "A Trip to Miami" is one of the comedy gems of the bill. The principals in the revue are supposed to be on the observation platform of a Pullman car, departing for the South. The illusion of fast train travel is provided by a motion picture cyclorama. The only trouble yesterday was that the filmed action made the car appear to be running backward toward the audience about a rod and a half from the tracks on which it was supposed to be! It is funny enough to be kept in.

A Leon Errol comedy, "Stage Fright;" a "Popular Science" release in natural color, and the Paramount News augment an interesting, if not distinguished, program.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Dec. 9.

FRANCES PERKINS: John Strachey, who was refused permission to enter America, and now is here under bond, wants to return to England, but the officials won't let him go—because, they explain their investigation isn't over yet . . . . Neville Chamberlain: Robert Morley, who portrayed Louis XVI in the movie, "Marie Antoinette," and who now is being starred in the current hit, "Oscar Wilde," plans to become an American citizen. G. B. Stern, the novelist, is considering taking a similar step . . . Will Hays: After all these years, Sam Goldwyn is objecting to the publication of Goldwyn gags—and is threatening suit.

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH: The Saturday Review of Literature just rejected an article they had ordered from Tom McClary concerning ghost-writing . . . . They rejected it because McClary stated that your series of articles in the New York Times was ghost-written. The New York Times editors informed the magazine publishers that no Times article ever was ghosted.

JOHN N. GARNER: Intimates of Senator Burton K. Wheeler insist that his next official move will mark his restoration to the liberal bloc . . . . Veloz & Yolanda: Tony de Marco, who announced his retirement from dancing two weeks ago, has changed his mind. He'll resume his career when he and Rence de Marco become reconciled within the next few days.

COL. BATISTA: Herman Shumlin, the producer, and Arthur Kober, the playwright, went to Havana, where some officials explained the Irish influence upon Cuba. "The Irish came, settled here, and have left their marks," the New Yorkers were told. "For instance, 'Obregon' really is 'O'Brien,' etc." . . . "Now I understand something that had puzzled me," Shumlin replied. "Everywhere I went, I saw signs reading 'Gomez Kelly.' On almost every street corner I saw such a sign, 'Gomez Kelly'" . . . "That's not Irish influence," Shumlin was told. "That's Spanish—for 'Kelly Tires.'"

J. EDGAR HOOVER: Warner Bros. is preparing to screen a story based upon the recent Nazi spy trials. Edward G. Robinson will portray the role of Leon Turrou, the G-man who broke the case . . . . Vincent Astor: The newspapers yesterday front paged the revelation—which appeared in this column nine days ago—that "Alexis Bolan," who portrays a commissar in "Leave It to Me," really is Prince Alexis Obolensky, sr., and that he had resigned from the Russian Noble Associates. Some of the papers, however, used a photo of your brother-in-law, who has the same name, but who is a cousin to this Obolensky.

TOM DEWEY: Justice Ferdinand Pecora has been invited to address the convention of the United States Association of Law Schools at the end of this month.

MARTHA GRAHAM: A curator of the Met. Museum of Art is interested in purchasing, for the museum, Paul Meltsner's portrait of you . . . . Although you posed for your new portrait in a black dress, the portrait will show you wearing a red dress. Marcella de Roche, one of Meltsner's models, thought you didn't look as well in the black dress, and smeared red paint over that portion of the picture.

FRENCH LINE: Clifford Odets and Luise Rainer were all prepared to go to Europe on the next voyage of the Normandie—but they've been delayed by your seamen's strike.

PHIL BARRY: Doris Dudley was the only member of your cast who didn't hear the midnight broadcast of the drama-review of your play, "Here Come the Clowns," which opened last night. Doris remembered about the broadcast five minutes too late. The radio reviewer was her father, Bide Dudley . . . . Brenda Frazier: Martha Stephenson, the debutante, is being screen-tested by MGM.

Rialto

"Professor Mamlock," which opened at the Rialto Theater yesterday afternoon, is at once a grippingly fascinating film and the strongest anti-Nazi propaganda seen on the screen.

Of all the subjects of contemporary concern, none has proved so difficult to dramatize as the anti-Nazi conception. The many attempts already made have resulted in scorching literary diatribes, but complete dramatic fiascos. "Professor Mamlock" proves an exception to this unfortunate tradition.

The time is the Reichstag fire and the early Hitler regime. Professor Mamlock has wide renown as a scientist and surgeon. While conscious of the raging political activity of the time, he forbids political discussion in his highly respected clinic. His son is alive to the imminent dangers of the National Socialist Party, and takes a vital part in the crusade against it. Professor Mamlock objects to this interest. Using the Reichstag fire as an excuse, the Nazi forces gain their hold and begin the persecution against the Jews.

Hero Is Degraded

Although honored by his country for his action at Verdun, the doctor is degraded by Storm Troopers, who take over the clinic. He is branded "Jude" and publicly disgraced, only to be called back to the hospital when an operation arises which only he can perform. The professor realizes the treachery of the regime and is wounded by one of the troopers in an attempt to escape. His son's circle, meanwhile, has been rounded up and is to be sent to a concentration camp. Escape is effected, only to lead the youth to a roof overlooking a raging street. There on a balcony, his father is shouting to people and Storm Troopers alike, the cry of humanity against intolerance. A shot silences him.

Friedrich Wolf collaborated with Director Adolph Minkin and Herbert Rapport in adapting his play to the screen. Their handling of the story is at all times fiercely realistic, climaxing in the tremendous final scene of Mamlock's denunciation.

As an instrument of propaganda it has one great difficulty to overcome. It stems from the Lenfilm studios in Leningrad, the home of a philosophy of government viewed here with equal distrust. Paradoxically, however, it was presented on the New York stage by the WPA Federal Theater, although with none of the success the authorities apparently hoped it would have.

While "Professor Mamlock" is strong meat, it is a gripping and important film.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married 22 Years, Ignored by Husband for 8 Years, Yet Loving Him, Should Wife Seek Divorce?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been interested in the discussion introduced by "Bewildered," on November 20. I think many women of middle age are faced with a similar problem and each situation calls for its own method of adjustment. I haven't solved mine, but I am at last willing to ask for disinterested advice. I have completely accepted the fact that my husband is no longer in love with me. For over eight years his increasing indifference has made me realize that I am just a part of the household, a sort of managing director. He is willing to have me make any decisions as long as I do not discuss them with him.

We have three children of high school and college age and only where they are concerned will he be drawn into discussion. Toward them he displays a sort of parental affection—more pride in their accomplishment than fatherly love. He is not happy. He seems to have set for himself the task of being a dutiful husband and father. He works far too hard, and with a feverish intensity that makes me because it is the obligation he has assumed. He does not seem well. feel work is his only outlet for pent-up emotion.

I have tried every conceivable solution. I began by ignoring the situation; thinking it would work itself out. Then, I tried assuring him of my affection, and of my desire to help with whatever problem confronted him. Next, I approached the family physician who informed me that physical and psychiatric examinations indicated that my husband is tense and socially maladjusted, but in splendid general health. I realize now that I am his maladjustment. With friends, he escapes and becomes a normally happy personality. As soon as I am near, he tightens up and that gray look of grim endurance comes into his eyes.

Of course, the last solution I wish to consider is divorce. Am I selfish in thinking that I am doing my duty and bearing my burden by keeping a home for my children? Would it be better for all of us to be out of this atmosphere of family unhappiness? The children have their own activities. They will grow away from us in a few years—and what will be left? During the last eight years when I have been left so much to my own devices, I have developed a number of civic and social interests.

Shall I attempt to discuss divorce as something that is desirable for all of us? It will be a difficult subject to approach as I feel my husband is determined to do what he considers is his duty. I love my husband. I am continually hoping for a change in his attitude. I have tried to develop an indifference that would free me from this constant watchfulness but I have not been successful. I have loved him for 22 years and writing this letter has not been easy. Am I really in the position where divorce is the only remaining step to take?

Sincerely, MRS. R. L.

For Both to Decide

DEAR MRS. R. L.: Whether or not divorce is the only solution of your problem is a question to be decided by and between your husband and yourself. Painful though such a move may be to contemplate, after 22 years of marriage during which you have never ceased to love your husband, nevertheless it seems to me you have no alternative to offering him his freedom, considering the nature of his long-time reaction to you. That "gray look of grim endurance" which comes into his eyes when they rest on you bespeaks an emotion akin to revulsion, if not, indeed, hatred; and in very self respect, not to mention loving concern for his well being, you ought to be willing to dissolve the alliance, if that is the only way to break the spell of bitter antagonism.

There is a possibility that if you were to make so generous, so selfless, so sturdy an offer, it would open the floodgates of his frozen reserve and a better mutual understanding would result—an understanding which just might prove to be the salvation of your family life. Even supposing you can never again be sweethearts or lovers in marriage, it still might be that you could come to understand, respect, accept and co-operate with each other as friends, who have a joint responsibility to discharge.

Although you meant well, it has been a mistake to evade the issue for eight years by pretending at first to be unaware of, and, later, indifferent to, the fact that he no longer cares for you. I daresay he has known all along that you have been pretending, and much of his bitterness may stem from the cynical supposition that you have been willing to hang on to the material benefits of the union, at no matter what cost to the spirit.

If, as you suggest, he is animated by an obstinate determination to play the role of "dutiful husband and father" through to the bitter end, then I think he should be given the satisfaction of going on record to that effect, after which his attitude of suffering martyrdom should be deliberately challenged. He is not the only martyr in this situation; his wife and children share the burden equally, and his wife is probably not more to blame for his change of heart than certain other factors over which she had no control. It may be that this estrangement traces back to some romantic attachment which sprang up between your husband and another woman; an attachment which caused him to regret that he was already married and a father.

It may be that you two are badly mated, from every point of view—mentally, spiritually and physically. But so long as he has made no overt effort to raze the barrier, to bridge the difference, to effect a mutual understanding of the difficulty and its ill effects on each, to work toward a solution or tolerable easement of the conflict, he has no right to scowl on you as the villainess of the piece—and yet such seems to be his attitude.

All things considered, I think a discussion of divorce is in order. State your case much as you have done here—going back to the beginning, when you talked with the doctor, and leading up to now, when you realize at long last that, as you say "(you) are his maladjustment." Let him understand that you are offering him (or asking for) a divorce (as he pleases) for a number of reasons: because you love him enough to desire his happiness and peace of mind; because your own self-respect prohibits your living with a man who seems to detest you; because in a very short time your children—the only tie which seems to have bound you together for years—will have gone their separate ways, and because it is a tragic waste of human talent for two persons, with at least one-third of life yet ahead, to live together in suppressed antagonism and utter frustration when they might live apart with immeasurably increased personal satisfaction and social fruitfulness.

Mrs. Wallace Chiswell, president of the unit, will receive the guests.

'Ancestor Gown' by Schoolboy

Falls Church Boy, 16, Ranks As Youngest Dress Designer

Observant Student Rates Much Attention For His Theories; Ideas Are Accepted By Leading Luxury Shop in New York

This is the fifth in a series of articles on American fashion design.

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

INNER BEAUTY of the mind plus a variety of interests and experiences are greater aids to women than any amount of superficial emollients. This analysis of feminine charm comes, not from a seasoned beauty connoisseur, but from an observant youth of 16. Young Philip Hevenor, of Falls Church, Va., rates much attention for his theories. His niche is unique. He ranks as America's youngest dress designer.

PHILIP HEVENOR

Just past 16, Philip, until a year ago, had never attempted to commercialize his designing talent. His adoration of all things beautiful, however, is responsible not only for his sage views but for his initiation into one of the world's most competitive professions. Last spring, to the great surprise of his parents and fellow schoolmates, the athletic youth sketched off some period evening gowns based on Eighteenth Century elegance. To his astonishment the leading luxury shop in New York purchased his ideas and thought so well of them that they labeled them "Ancestor Gowns" and gave the youthful designer a start on his career.

Keen Observer

According to Philip, Barbara Hutton is the most enchanting woman in the world. She reflects good taste, distinction, and a reposed beauty plus a worldly eclat," he asserts. The chic countess, he believes, has captured a cosmopolitanism for which other women seek in vain all their lives.

Philip believes that no woman need be commonplace with all the cultural opportunities available. "Living a full life," he observes, "rounds out a woman's facial expression. She becomes vital. She radiates intelligence and balance, while the woman who shrinks within her own little shell looks dull, unexciting and, naturally, uninviting. Constance Bennett and Irene Dunne are two clever Americans who have become more fascinating with the years because they are mentally alive."

Women Need Poise

The average American woman might do well to strive for a similar poise and reflected beauty, thinks Philip. She should never seek for radicalism in dress or make-up. A slower acquisition of "polish" is more lasting. Coiffures have more to do with this gradual attainment of poise than any one factor, the rangy Hevenor insists. Up-hair, he stressed, will give a gentility to the most plebeian face.

Philip stressed the service which dark colors play in the average woman's life. "Rich, deep warm hues are so much more flattering to the woman of limited wardrobe than pastels, fluffy prints or indeterminate colors," he says.

As a parting shot of advice, Philip recommends a long look at the ultra-feminine clothes and beauty of two of his film favorites, Loretta Young and Olivia de Havilland. "They are not afraid of glamour," he says. "They wear the soft, pretty things most women dream of wearing, they never underdress, as do most women, and most important, they are glamorous because they feel beautiful."

Your Figure

More Energy Needed to Alibi Than to Reduce

Will to Slim Can Overcome the Lack Of Space and Time

Due to the large number of requests for Miss Kain's 21-day diet for reducers, The Post will reprint this diet over a period of 21 days beginning January 2.

By Ida Jean Kain.

ALMOST anyone can trump up an excuse for not exercising, and Elizabeth Rethberg, blonde soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is convinced that if women spent half the time in exercising that they spend inventing alibis to avoid it, they would all be a lot healthier.

Two favorite explanations of failure to exercise are lack of time and lack of space. Mme. Rethberg, whose concert tours means a great deal of traveling, could easily avail herself of these two excuses, for traveling not only involves considerable rushing about but a pullman car is the last place one would expect to use as a gymnasium.

Need Little Space

Nevertheless, a singer's voice demands that she keep fit and audiences these days expect streamlines, so exercise is too important to be alibied. Mme. Rethberg has solved the problems of little time and space with a set of "Pullman specials" that will be very helpful to any of you who have the difficulties.

These exercises get results, too, for they very efficiently put to work the muscles most important to your health and figure. You do not have to romp around and thresh about to exercise these muscles. A most effective exercise for streamlining the midsection can be performed on a day bed or a small mat on the floor. Here it is:

Lie flat on the back, stretched to full extension, and raise one knee until the sole of the foot rests on the matress just under the hip. Press down with the foot, prying the hips off the bed, until the body is is in a straight line, then slowly lower. Repeat with each leg, five times, relaxing completely between times.

For the uplift this exercise will do wonders. Still lying on the back, raise the arms, cup one hand, and place the fist of the other hand in the cup. Slowly push the hands back and forth across the chest, pushing with one hand and resisting with the other. This exercise will strengthen the pectoral muscles and help to normalize the best contour.

You Must Relax

Now, roll over on your face, with the arms straight down at the sides, feet straight down. You should be quite relaxed in this position. Then, simultaneously, raise arms and chest, legs and hips off the bed. Gradually relax, and repeat five times.

A variation of the foregoing exercise is to keep the legs on the bed and raise the arms backward from the sides, keeping the head and back in a straight line, and pushing up as high as possible. Try to do all the exercises correctly so that a pull is felt on the neglected muscles.

Civilizing Christmas

Brighter days loom ahead for harried Christmas shoppers as a result of a series of reforms to be instituted by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League

"I have at last surrendered to Christmas and now am going to make the best of it," announced the indefatigable Mrs. DeGoofey yesterday. There is no use to try to stop people from indulging in their annual pre-Christmas insanity, but their behavior can at least be regulated."

"Will you seek legislation, Mrs. DeGoofey?" inquired the interviewer.

"No, this year's campaign will be purely voluntary. However, we do expect to ask the next Congress to prohibit anyone more than 14 years old from receiving a Christmas present and making it a felony for any adult to go around the day after Christmas saying to any other adult, "Well, what did Santa Claus bring you?"

"What is your immediate plan of action, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

The Card Question

"Well, first, the Do Something About It League will seek general support of its Christmas card code, which is as follows:

"No cards to be sent bearing the words 'Merry Xmas.'

"No cards to be sent bearing verses containing any reference to Saint Nick, reindeer, 'joyous Yuletide' or Christmas bells. In fact, the league, before another year, expects to have its own shop, at which attractive Christmas cards may be obtained without ANY verses.

"No original Christmas cards may be sent, as these are a source of deep humiliation to recipients who have just dispatched their conventionalized drawings of Santa and camels obtained at 10-cent stores.

"No cards to be sent to persons met on trains, or on vacations, or at week-end parties, or to casual acquaintances who have just been promoted to better jobs, won professional honors or made killings on the stock market.

Women May March

"That completes our code. Another matter the league is working for is a ban on the mailing of Christmas boxes—you know the type, in which you assemble something for every member of the family, and even the neighbors. Getting off these boxes is a definite contributing cause to the increase of women patients in mental hospitals."

"How will your league enforce its program Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"By propaganda. We expect to establish downtown headquarters and send out literature. We also may march on the White House."

"What else will you do at your headquarters, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"We will have a filing system with trained accountants to help senders of Christmas cards and presents keep check of what they send out and receive. In that way no mistake will be made the next year in forwarding the same presents to other friends or relatives. Thus, if you receive a crocheted boudoir cap from your Aunt Nannie, in California, there will be no danger of your sending it on next Christmas, either to her or any relative who lives near her, but can forward it, say to your Cousin Natalie who lives in New York."

"Any other ideas, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

A Dollar to Spend

"One more, and it's most important. After much meditation I have finally decided that what this country really needs is a good $1 Christmas present. Consequently, we are offering a prize of a beautiful pair of homemade fancy garters for the best suggestions along this line. Here are the rules:

"The gift must be unusual.

"It must be useful, but also Christmasy.

"It must be something that anybody would want or that any member of the family could use.

"It must not be a compact or a pair of stockings."

"Just how soon will you establish your downtown headquarters Mrs. DeGoofey, and get your drive under way?"

"Well just as soon as I get my own Christmas shopping completed."

"When will that be?"

"Well, I don't just know. You see I've been so busy that I haven't really started yet."

Law Class Plans Prom Tonight

The junior law class of Southeastern University will hold its annual prom tonight at 10 o'clock at the Burlington Hotel. J. Weldon Choate is chairman of the committee in charge, which includes Orland Shaw, Everett A. Hoffman, James J. Francis and Thomas F. Kilroy.

Before the dancing begins, a reception will be held for the distinguished guests and faculty members, among whom are Dr. James A. Bell, president of the university, and Mrs. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Wilson, Dr. Herbert Grossman, Mr. and Mrs. Simon S. Lasica, Mr. and Mrs. August H. Moran, Mr. Charles C. Collins, Dr. and Mrs. Henry M. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Ross H. Snyder, Mr. William A. Read, Mr. and Mrs. W. Cameron Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Hickman, Dr. and Mrs. Baughman and Mr. and Mrs. Alden W. Hoage.

In the receiving line will be Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Batts, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson, Mrs. J. Choate and Mr. Herbert F. Linneman

Hadassah Division Plans Members' Tea

The business and professional women's division of Hadassah will give a membership tea tomorrow at 3 o'clock in the gymnasium room of Harvard Hall, at 1650 Harvard street northwest. At this tea each member is expected to bring a new member.

In view of the sufferings of Jews in Europe, especially in Germany, the Zionist organizations are seeking to increase their membership.

SATURDAY DINNER

Chilled carrot juice
Salted crackers
Beef and bean chili
Baked acorn squash
Cabbage slaw
Browned eggplant slices
Hot coffee Nut sticks

BEEF AND BEAN CHILI

Use navy, kidney or shell beans. Cook tender or use canned beans. Melt 6 tablespoons of fat, add 6 tablespoons of flour and stir smooth. Then add 3 cups of stock and ½ cup of tomato juice. Stir until smooth and thickened. For the stock, use any meat broth or gravy, bean liquor or condensed bouillion—only slightly diluted. Saute 1 large, peeled sliced onion and 1 pound ground chuck meat in the remaining 2 tablespoons of fat until golden brown. Then add the gravy, the beans, 2 tablespoons of chili powder mixed smooth with a little of the gravy. Add salt to taste. Simmer for about 15 minutes and serve. Serves six to eight.

SUNDAY BREAKFAST

Baked apple in cream
Scrambled eggs in butter
Grill of baby sausages, bacon and mushrooms
Date and nut coffee ring
Hot coffee Milk for children

SUNDAY DINNER

Fresh shrimp cocktail in tomato sauce
Fried chicken a la Maryland

SUNDAY SUPPER

Scalloped beef and beans (remains of last nights' left overs)
Ketchup sauce
Toast points
Assorted relishes and pickles
Chocolate Crispies
Minted fruit punch

CHOCOLATE CRISPIES

Melt 1 pound of (dipping type) chocolate in a double boiler. Add the followig ingredients, 3 cups of puffed rice, 1 cup of peanuts, and ¼ teaspoon of salt. Mix thoroughly and drop portions from tip of spoon onto waxed paper. Cool until set.

Hint on Spoon Bread

Bake and serve spoon or corn bread in well buttered, individual baking dishes, custard cups or casseroles. This keeps the bread hotter, requires less baking time and makes it easier to serve.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 9.

WHEN THE big boats come in and go out in the dead of winter, there may not be the frantic excitement of the summer sailings, but interesting things do go on, at that. And you're always meeting some people worth knowing, even if they run like mad when they sight a reporter. Some people are like that.

ALICE HUGHES

Some other people are like Mr. Clifford Furst, a jewelry designer I saw go away on the Normandie not long ago. Mr. Furst is unhappy, even on that beautiful boat, and for a strange reason. He is miserable because he thinks Queen Elizabeth of England is going to outshine our Mrs. Roosevelt next summer in the matter of gems. Mr. Furst feels that this great Republic should have a set of crown jewels to be worn on state occasions by the wife of the President, whoever he may be at the time. The rest of the time they should be stored in the Treasury Department. Mr. Furst is not trying to drum up business—he just thinks it is too bad that the top lady of this great Nation should be outglittered by any old foreign potentate that comes our way to sample the ham and beans.

We also learned that Author Ernest Hemingway, who divides his time between shell-stricken Madrid and our Stork Club, has a new fan. Her name is Marlene Dietrich. The beautiful German got an autographed copy of his new book, "The Fifth Column," when they came in on the ship—so another man bit a dog.

Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow is never bothered by interviewers. The press seems to think of her as "Lindbergh's mother-in-law," which automatically gives her the mustn't-touch air. Maybe Mrs. Morrow would like to talk to a pleasant, well-mannered reporter. Who knows?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Tell daddy to bring you over, with the ribbon off the bankroll. Except for the few spots none of us can get in anyway, night club business here is not good. Whether the spenders are buying mink coats for their wives or something, they are not laying it out in our glittering dens of iniquity. I'd even go, but I'm no good to them. Old Mr. Hall, my spouse, is not supposed to drink, and anyway, the press agent usually kites the check for me, thinking my tapped words help out, in their small way . . .

The other night a play opened here. Its name was "Lorelei," and I still don't know whether the dramatic critics or the society reporters should have sat in. For in the cast of the feeble show were two pretty girls from uptown, Cobina Wright, jr., and Betty Hecksher, both making stage debuts and both doing all right in parts you could stick in your eye. But their swell pals turned out to the last upswing curl and mink jacket—and if the show dies untimely, at any rate the kids made their bows before the right folks. Nerts.

Well, the World's Fair we had planned to open here next spring might as well call it off. The Dionne Quintuplets won't be here. I think it quite right that the children should not be exhibited like five-legged calves. They are filthy rich already, and there is no reason why they should be shown about like freaks.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

When Edsel Ford appeared before the Trust Busters this week he seemed alert and deferential, but a little skeptical, and content to let his assistant and his patent counsel do most of the talking.

Once a Congressman embarked on a long hypothetical question that would have filled a typewritten page.

Dolly Gann
. . . unscarred

As the question (about patents) unwound and unwound, Ford's expression became more and more that of a man being given a baby to hold. Finally it ended and Mr. Ford meditated a moment.

"I'm afraid," he said at length, "that I didn't quite catch that part at the end."

The Representative was all for repeating the question—which would have been quite a feat—but compassionate Senator O'Mahoney (the monopoly chairman) suggested that Ford be excused.

* * * *

Whom should I encounter at a party the other evening but Dolly Gann, an ample, amiable, beaming lady unscarred by the great Dolly Gann-Alice Longworth schism of the Coolidge era. Both ladies still maintain Washington residences and are seen often in recherche circles, but the high, passionate winds of the Roosevelt thirties pass them by.

"—way to a Senator's heart"

Dolly Gann reminisced a moment about the perils of the limelight.

Once a photographer snapped her under a White House tree. In the resultant picture the shadow of a leaf caused a strange lump to appear below her ear.

Soon she received a letter from a Western medico.

"I see by your picture that you have a goiter," he wrote. "I am an expert on goiter; 100 per cent cure in most cases. Be glad to come to Washington any time."

* * * *

There's another way to a Senator's heart, besides the stomach route.

The second avenue is via his ears, with flattery. Probably no other 96 humans in the Republic hear so much flattery as the 96 Senators—and I'm not excepting the 96 loveliest movie stars.

* * * *

Tommy Corcoran has told friends he's thinking of going to a hospital for ten days; not because he's ill—or thoroughly exhausted, which he probably is—but because that is the only place he could get a little normal repose.

* * * *

Most of them accept it with a grain of salt; but I've never yet seen a Senator knock a man down—nor a lady, for that matter—for buttering him.

On lobbyists' expense accounts this butter appears in various guises. But it must cost at least $100 a pound.

"—Poe followed orders"

From a midshipman at the Naval Academy comes more light on why Edgar Allan Poe (once a cadet at West Point) became a poet instead of a general. After several lesser escapades, Poe finally perpetrated a classic which many a cadet and many a midshipman has longed to emulate. The word had been passed out one day that the uniform for parade was to be cross-belts.

Poe (so my naval informant assures me) appeared for parade in cross-belts—and nothing else. And I believe him, too, because he postscripts: "Your column is the most widely read newspaper feature at the Academy."

* * * *

Someone started the silly story—a pacifist, perhaps—that 238 Army officers were put on the lists for the memorable Cuban reception for Dictator Batista.

Well, there weren't any such number. The Army's list totaled only 87 names, and some of these were unable to go. Probably somebody just lumped all the Army, Navy and Marine Corps guests in this weird tale.

* * * *

I sauntered into the TVA hearing, where a Congressman and a TVA official were juggling back and forth the figures $107,000,000, $99,000,000 and $65,000,000. They seemed to be wrestling about the cost of the flood control part of TVA, and the only thing they seemed to agree on was that it was an impenetrable puzzle.

When the Congressman would ask a question about the $65,000,000 the official would wind up talking about the $107,000,000.

* * * *

Then someone whispered:

"If a cook earning $9 a week were cooking a leg of lamb, some carrots, potatoes, baking a pie and some biscuits and at the same time darning some socks and washing out some diapers, consuming 28 cents' worth of electricity, how much would the gravy cost? Especially if she answered the door bell three times and the telephone twice?"

I walked out in a daze, with a vision of two medieval friars arguing how many angels could dance on the three tines of a pitchfork.

Parking Ban Tightened on 45 Streets

Northwest Section Will Feel Brunt Of New Restrictions By Commissioners

Further parking restrictions on 45 streets, most of them in the northwest section, were ordered yesterday by District Commissioners.

At the same time the Commissioners, acting upon the recommendation of William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, approved an amendment to the regulations prohibiting "owners, operators or persons having custody of a motor vehicle" from lending their car to unlicensed operators.

The present regulation only applies to registered owners and not to an operator or person in charge unless he be the owner, Van Duzer stated.

Fourteen streets were designated as one-way streets by the commissioners.

Streets affected by the ban in the northwest section follow:

Bohrer street, Florida avenue to U street, no parking on either side at any time, except on the east side parking will be permitted Sundays, 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., and 6:30 to 9:30 p. m.

Canary Pete Steals Show by Warbling 'Yankee Doodle'

—E. M. Jameson poses with Yankee Doodle, the bird he trained to whistle that tune. Amelia Rosson holds Buck, an 18-month-old parrot owned by C. G. Daymude. They were seen at the bird show last night

A District product, Pete the Yankee Doodle Bird, stole the show—Washington's Fourth Annual Bird Show—from an imposing aggregation of American and English canaries at the Continental Hotel yesterday.

As 630 competitors chirped an envious chorus from their cages along the wall, Pete sat in solitary grandeur in a glass-inclosed cage set apart at one end of the room from his colleagues of lesser light.

E. M. Jameson, of 1237 W street southeast, owner and trainer of the bird, has 174 other canaries, but Pete is his favorite.

Not only is Pete "handsome" with his pure white plumage, but a bird of rare intelligence, Jameson claims. "It only took me four months to teach him to sing 'Yankee Doodle'—something none of my other birds have learned, no matter how long I trained them."

Jameson naturally takes great pride in his talented canary. Regrettable to Jameson is the fact that the Bird Show authorities have barred Pete from competition for the awards to be presented today. Jameson feels his bird would "win in a walk."

Besides the Hartz Mountain canaries, outstanding singers, which will stage their own competition, various other classes will compete for general prizes.

Prominent among these will be English and Scottish canaries of the Yorkshire breed, a streamlined bird of 7 to 8 inches in length, and the Norwich type, round bodies and a pleasing songster.

Less usual breeds of canaries in the show will be the Pepper-fed canary, a bird which changes from yellow to a pinkish color as it eats paprica, and the Mule and Lizard, hybrid types of unusual coloring.

A host of other canaries and wild birds will be fighting for recognition. Frills, Siskins, Border Fancies, Cinnamons and Fawns will compete in the canary classes. Parakeets parrots and love birds from Australia, China and Russia will also spread their wings in pride before the judges.

WPA $200,000 Half Fulfills Zoo's Program

'Finest in the World,' Dr. Mann's Ambition; 400 Men Now at Work

National Zoological Park, which draws the largest crowds of any attraction in Washington, yesterday neared the halfway mark in an improvement program intended to make both visitors and animals more comfortable and content.

Under WPA auspices, more than $200,000 is being spent on new walks, roadway repairs, parking areas, grading, landscaping and other public conveniences, as well as construction of additional cages, pits, paddocks, a bird pond and miscellaneous animal quarters.

"The results of this project will be of inestimable value to the Zoo," said Director William M. Mann, in the course of an inspection tour yesterday. "When the work is finished we will have an appropriate setting for half of the finest zoo in the world."

Plant Now Half Finished

That is to say, he explained, the Zoo still will be only one-half finished with four first-class exhibition buildings and four which should be replaced. In the first group, he continued, are the bird, reptile, pachyderm and small mammal nouses. In the second are the lion, monkey and antelope houses and the restaurant building.

Approximately 90 per cent of the $200,000 allocated by WPA will be paid out as wages to relief workers. The number of laborers on the job has been averaging 400 a day since the project was launched early in August. The work is expected to be completed by midsummer.

A "three-ring circus," as Dr. Mann calls it, is being built between the antelope and mammal houses. Actually, it is a group of three large circular pits. Prairie dogs will populate one, raccoons another, and the third will be inhabited by badgers or some other small mammals.

Bird Pond Completed

The buffalo range near the Connecticut avenue entrance is being regraded so the huge beasts may be easily visible from the sidewalks and road. New paddocks will be built for the zebus and hybrid zebras.

In the rear of the buffalo range a grain warehouse of stone will be erected. This will be the largest structure of the project. The new pachyderm and mammal houses, as well as the bird-house annex, were built with PWA funds.

Already completed is a pond at the rear of the bird house which will be stocked with one or more species of aquatic birds in the spring.

The program calls for planting of 400 trees and 600 shrubs and transplanting of 500 trees and shrubs.

$25 Dodd Sent To Auto Victim To Be Rejected

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Dec. 9.—George E. Haw, Richmond attorney, said tonight a $25 check tendered to Lespinia W. Grimes, mother of a 4-year-old colored child injured in what police described as a hit-run accident near Hanover Courthouse Monday, would be returned to former Ambassador William E. Dodd, sr.

The former diplomat is free under $2,000 bond pending arraignment at Ashland December 17 on a warrant charging him with being driver of the car which struck the child.

Text of a letter from the former ambassador to the mother of the child, made public here today, said the reason Dr. Dodd "did not stop to talk things over was that I thought the child had escaped."

Text of Dr. Dodd's letter, written on stationary embossed "Embassy of the United States of America," follows:

"Dear Mrs. Grimes:

"I am enclosing you a check to help pay expenses; but if newspapers start a sensation on me, or if you start legal procedure against me—

"It was absolutely not my fault. The youngster started across the road when my car was running 45 miles an hour—on the way to lecture in south Virginia. I did my best to stop, but it was impossible when I was about 30 feet away when the youngster started across the road. When I put on my brakes the car turned almost around and a woman driving behind could hardly avoid hitting my car. She did escape by a foot or two. You see it was entirely your child's fault, not mine. Nobody can stop a car running the regular rate in 30 feet.

"The reason I did not stop to talk things over was that I thought the child had escaped. Besides I did not want the newspapers all over the country to publish a story about the accident. You know how newspapers love to exagerate things of this sort. I hope your child recovers.

"Yours truly,

"WILLIAM E. DODD."

Lie-Detector Test Refused for D. C. Holdup Suspect

Justice Laws refused yesterday to order a lie-detector test at Government expense on James Curtis, 35, accused of armed robbery.

Assistant District Attorney Jackson opposed the application made for Curtis by Attorney James J. Laughlin. Jackson contended lie detectors are not yet perfected.

Laughlin directed Justice Laws' attention to several trials in which the instruments were used.

The court held, however, that to determine whether the detectors are dependable is the function of Congress rather than the courts.

450 Attend Dinner And Floor Show Of Kilowatt Club

The Kilowatt Club held its fifth banquet at the Willard Hotel last night with 450 present. The club is a social organization of officers and employes of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

A. G. Neal, vice president of the power company, was toastmaster for the festivities, which included a floor show. There were no speeches. Several of the members and guests were delayed by the rerouting of traffic due to a manhole explosion on E street near the Willard.

Guests present included E. C. Graham, director of the Capital Transit Co.; J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller of the Capital Transit Co.; Percy Thompson, director of the Capital Transit Co.; L. H. Mitchell, a director of both Potomac Electric and Capital Transit companies; W. B. Bennett, secretary of the Capital Transit Co.; R. W. Wade, assistant comptroller of the Capital Transit Co.; E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co.; J. H. Stephens, vice president of the Capital Transit Co.; C. B. Koontz, assistant treasurer of the Capital Transit Co.; L. B. Schloss, vice president and general manager of the Glen Echo Co.; I. Fleming, purchasing agent of the Capital Transit Co., and W. ... Clarke, assistant secretary of the Capital Transit Co.

8 'Fashionable' Bootleggers Admit Guilt

9 Others Indicted for Conspiracy to Make Liquor in N. W. Homes

Nine persons indicted for conspiring to make bootleg liquor in fashionable homes in the Northwest section yesterday were ordered to trial December 19 after eight others pleaded guilty before Justice Laws.

The huge ring, which concealed its distilleries behind the front of well-kept lawns and shipped its product in a fleet of trucks, was smashed after Federal agents observed its huge purchases of sugar.

Assistant District Attorney Fihelly said that of the 25 originally accused only 3 are still fugitives. Fihelly told the court he expected other guilty pleas when the trial is next called. Five pleaded guilty earlier in the year.

Those who pleaded guilty yesterday will be sentenced December 20, Justice Laws said, after the probation office reports on their records. They are Ralph Marcontini, Thomas Levine, Nazzereno Magnatera, Guillo Quattrini, Paul S. Barnes, Frederick Johnson, Harold Joseph Sweeney and Ralph Brannon.

Fihelly said he was considering dismissing charges against John Della Gatta, Lawrence Hall, Corbin Shields, Mrs. Marcontini and Mrs. Levine.

Refusing to plead guilty yesterday were Irving Rosenberg, Nathan Cosman, Bernard Freeman and James Fulton Griffin.

Catholics to Take Wholesome Film Oath Tomorrow

Hundreds of thousands of Catholics will stand up before their pastors in churches throughout the country tomorrow and renew the pledge of the Legion of Decency to stay away from immoral motion pictures as constituting "a grave menace to youth, home life, country and religion."

The date for this annual ceremony was set by the Committee of Bishops on Motion Pictures meeting here at a general assemblage of the hierarchy last October.

Cleveland Park Group Staging Window Contest

The Cleveland Park Businessmen's Association announced yesterday a Christmas lighting contest for members of the association. Twenty-five dollars will be presented to the business house whose window or storefront is selected as the best decorated on Connecticut avenue, between Calvert street and Chevy Chase Circle.

Entries in the emblem contest will be accepted until midnight tonight. The winning design will become the association's insignia.

Friendship Urged For Philippines

Sympathetic treatment of the Philippines was recommended yesterday by Brig. Gen. Charles Burnett, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, in his annual report.

Prevention of legislation which would "abridge the rights and prvilleges as possessed by the Filipinos in the United States at the time of the inauguration of the Commonwealth government," is a constant policy of his bureau, he said.

"During the Commonwealth period, while they still owe allegiance to the United States, it seems desirable that our record of sympathetic treatment throughout the 40-year period of Philippine-American relations be not marred by abrogating rights and privileges heretofore accorded them," Gen. Burnett declared.

Contracts for construction of a residence and office for High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt in Manila and at Baguio, the summer capital, have been awarded, he stated, adding that the building in Manila will cost $440,794 while the structure at Baguio will cost $151,200.

Shotgun Bandit Robs Two More Liquor Stores

The sawed-off shotgun bandit performed his weekly holdup here last night—robbing two liquor stores instead of his customary one. Other gunmen raided two more liquor stores, with the night's loot totaling $504.

The shotgun bandit first visited the Vintage Liquor Store, 2610 Connecticut avenue, and lined up seven persons at gunpoint. He forced Martin Berman, the manager, to produce $230, then robbed the others of $40. It was his second visit, having taken $40 several weeks ago.

The raider then flashed his shotgun on three persons in King's Liquor Store, 1424 L street northwest, robbing Ballin Loven, manager, 15 Gallatin street northwest, of $164.

A gunman held up Sam Wolf, proprietor of Terminal Liquor Store, 1812 Fourth street northeast, and escaped with $40. Another holdup victim was H. Gurvich, owner of Iowa Liquor Store, 1317 Thirteenth street northwest, who lost $30.

Baptist Student Union Told Today's Peril Is Lowered Standards of Christian Living

"The greatest peril of our day is not the war in the Far East, or Europe, but the peril of lowered standards of Christian living."

Thus declared William Hall Preston, associate student secretary, speaking last night before 250 persons at the annual banquet of the Washington-Maryland Baptist Student Union at National Baptist Memorial Church.

Preston added, however, that "the young people of today have the equipment to fight that peril through 'comradeship with Christ.' If you want a job done," he said, "give it to youth."

Preston, introduced by Haley Scurlock, toastmaster, president of the union, urged the students "not to be satisfied with becoming just doctors, lawyers or teachers, but to strive toward becoming Christian leaders in the professions."

Mrs. Frances J. Nichels, many years a supporter of the student work, who returned recently from the Orient, spoke briefly at the dinner. Mrs. G. A. Ross, president of the D. C. Baptist Women's Missionary Union, presided. Greetings were presented by Dr. Gove G. Johnson, pastor of the host church; Dr. Raymond Seegar, George Washington University professor, and Howard Rees, local student secretary. Other guests were Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Union; Mrs. O. E. Howe, former head of the Baptist Women's Missionary Union; Mrs. W. G. Waldo, former District student councilor, and Mrs. Seegar.

Music was furnished by the Baptist Student Quartette. George Washington, American, Maryland, Johns Hopkins and Benjamin Franklin universities were among those represented. Dr. J. T. Watts, executive secretary of the Maryland Association, gave the benediction. Women of the Baptist Memorial congregation, assisted by Girl Scouts, prepared and served the dinner.

D. C. Orders Hearing on Civil Service

U. S. Budget Chief, Federal Group and School Officials Oppose City Plan

In an effort to meet all reasonable objections raised by the Federal Civil Service Commission and local school officials, the District Commissioners yesterday appointed a six-man committee and planned a public hearing in defense of their proposal to establish a separate agency for hiring municipal employes.

The committee, headed by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and chairman of the District Personnel Board, was instructed to consider objections and revise their proposal to meet all valid suggestions.

Bell's Objections Published

A list of eight objections, forwarded to the Commissioners September 15 by Acting Budget Bureau Director D. W. Bell, were made public yesterday. The main one is that a proposed bill to establish a District Civil Service Commission places full power of appointments in the hands of the Commissioners.

Several members of the newly appointed committee said yesterday they would meet this objection by revising the proposed bill to the extent that a group of citizens appointed by the commissioners would be given authority to administer the proposed Civil Service Commission.

The commissioners also made public yesterday serious objections by the board of education which would maintain the present arrangement.

Blanketing-In Opposed

The Federal commission has questioned a provision of the proposed bill which would "blanket-in" all those District employes who have served six consecutive months or longer, indicating it felt such employes should be required to take non-competitive examinations.

Besides Donovan, members of the committee are Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal; Chester Gray, assistant corporation counsel; Geoffrey Thornett, Commissioners' secretary; Guy Pearson, chief clerk of the engineer department, and John J. McDonald, representing the District Government unit of the American Federation of Government Employes.

450,000 Pneumonia Cases Cost Patients 75 Million Yearly

A case of pneumonia may cost the patient as much as $1,500 or as little as $5.50, but the average is $167.60, according to a report issued yesterday by the United States Public Health Service.

Joseph Hirsh, research associate of the Committee on Research in Medical Economics, conducted a study in New York which led to the following conclusions:

The annual medical bill for pneumonia amounts to more than $75,000,000 in the United States.

Approximately 450,000 cases occur each year, 25 per cent of which prove fatal.

"This toll exceeds that of any other communicable disease," says the Hirsh report to the Public Health Service. "It also contributes to many thousands of deaths annually which are officially attributed to other causes."

Introducing Mr. Stack

Maybe it's because I've been spending so much time in the Yale Club lately that I have been hearing so much about Joe Stack, next year's varsity football captain. Until Thursday night, Stack was just a pretty fair center as far as I was concerned. But Thursday night George Trevor matched four sports writers against four coaches in an intelligence test on the radio (the sports writers won) and took them to dinner beforehand—at the Yale Club.

VIDMER.

Yesterday Malcolm Farmer had a luncheon—at the Yale Club. Last night the Traft School Alumni met for dinner—at the Yale Club. The first thing I know I'll be getting a bill for my board.

But anyway I've been hearing a lot about this young fellow Stack. It seems that his father is a professor at Michigan State and a friend of the late Knute Rockne. So when Joe was just a lad in knickers he was weaned away from his father's institution at East Lansing. He was going to play for Rock.

But when Joe was old enough to go to college there was no Rock to play for. He had been killed in an airplane crash. So Joe decided to go to Yale. There were objections from his home town. They told him he would be lost in the shuffle at Yale. That preference would be given to the Eastern prep school boys. But young Master Stack had his heart set on Yale and so he applied for a scholarship.

Young Man Goes East

Most applicants for scholarships place their athletic achievements at the top of their records, but Joe listed first his scholastic standing, then the fact that he had been class president, then the activities in which he had engaged in school, and away down at the bottom he casually mentioned that he had played football. That immediately caught the attention of the scholarship committee and the East Lansing school boy got to Yale.

That year there were three centers among the candidates for the freshman team, two of them with Eastern prep school reputations. But Joe was not lost in the shuffle. Instead he was placed at center and the Eastern lads were remodeled into guards. And after a couple of games, when the freshmen met to elect a captain, they chose Joe Stack.

In the spring he turned out for the varsity squad and caught the eye of Ducky Pond. But what also caught the coach's eye was the fact that Stack wasn't especially accurate with his passing.

"As a matter of fact," Joe laughs, "the only reason Ducky used me the next year was to keep the backfield men alert. If he thought they were getting a little careless back there he would stick me in and they knew they would have to be on the lookout or I'd pass one over their heads."

Unwelcome Arrival

And he also tells about a game that was played in a pouring rain during his sophomore year. Just which game it was I can't remember, but according to the youngster the rain was coming down in sheets. It was so heavy that the players hardly could distinguish their opponents across the line of scrimmage, and the backs were handling the ball as though it were a cake of soap in a bath tub.

Then suddenly the whistle blew. Yale was making a substitution. Al Wilson peered toward the sidelines to see who was coming on the field. He couldn't recognize the player and took a few steps in his direction to get a better view through the rain.

Suddenly he halted in the mud and mire, a look of horror came over his face and then he turned to the other backs and in a distressed tone said:

"Good Lord, fellows, it's Stack!"

According to Joe the backfield men never liked to see him come into the game because he fed them such erratic passes from center. So Ducky Pond gave him a football to take home with him at the end of his freshman year and when he came back the next fall he was issued a blue jersey, instead of a gray one. He was on the varsity squad.

"I really think the only reason Pond gave me a blue jersey was because I brought back the ball," Joe grins.

But that couldn't have been the only reason, for Stack played second string center behind Frank Gallagher that season. And in between times he practiced kicking off, although he claims the only fellow he could beat in that department was Pond.

Futile Argument

That's how Stack accounts for the fact that he got into the sensational Dartmouth game that season. Perhaps you will recall how the Big Green team came down from the hills unbeaten, untied and hailed as the greatest in the ivy group. How Dartmouth held a seven-point lead with less than a minute to play. How Clint Frank flipped a pass to Al Hessberg and Al slipped and sped, dodged and drove to a touchdown. And how Bud Humphrey kicked the extra point that tied the score.

That was when Stack came in. Pond looked along the bench for someone to kickoff. He didn't want someone who would kick the ball deep into Dartmouth territory and give some whirling back like McLeod or Hutchinson or Howe a chance to get a start and run the length of the field. He wanted someone who would kick the ball short, for there were only 15 seconds to play.

Stack was just the fellow. He had been practicing kickoffs all summer but couldn't kick the ball into the danger zone if he tried.

Hein Voted Pros' Most Valuable

Giants' Center, Eight-Year Veteran, to Get Watch as Trophy in New York Sunday

By George Kirksey,
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Dec. 9.—Mel Hein owed $1,000 and that's why he became a professional football player. Now after eight years in the cash and carry ranks, Hein, center on the New York Giants, is considered the nearest thing to perfection in football.

Somewhat belatedly, he was chosen today as the most valuable player in the National Professional League and before the Giants-Green Bay Packers' championship playoff Sunday, at the Polo Grounds, he'll receive the Gruen Award of Merit from Joe Carr, league president. Earl (Dutch) Clark, Detroit coach and quarterback, won last year's award.

The sports writers jury which picked Hein was composed of Harry Ferguson, United Press; H. G. Salsinger, Detroit News; Shirley Povich, The Washington Post; Warren Brown, Chicago Herald and Examiner; Ed Bang, Cleveland News, and Lawton Carver, I. N. S.

Won College Laurels

When Hein was graduated from Washington State in 1931 he had won numerous football laurels, including selection as All-America center in 1930, but he had debts of $1,000, incurred to carry him through school. Hein wanted to get out of the red as quickly as possible and when an attractive offer came from the New York Giants he turned professional. It took him two years to pay off his debts but he remained in the pro game because the wages were good and he liked to play.

Because of his modesty and strict attention to business on and off the field, Hein has probably received less publicity than any star football player of his time. Competent football critics rate him as the greatest center of this era. Every season Hein would perform his usual outstanding feats, receive recognition in the ranks as the perfect player, wind up on the all-pro team and then be forgotten.

"He never says three words all season," is the way teammates describe him.

Watch No. 7

The photographers who cover the Giants every Sunday pay Hein one of the greatest tributes. When a cameraman unfamiliar with football gets assigned to a Giants' game and inquiries about the ropes, the regular photographers tell him: "On defense all you do is keep your camera trained on No. 7. He'll be where the ball is."

Hein's No. 7.

After eight years in pro football Hein finally made a touchdown against Green Bay November 20. He intercepted a pass and ran 50 yards for the score.

"By gosh, I'm gonna outrun 'em," Hein says he muttered to himself when he got hold of the ball.

Hein is 6 feet 2 inches in height, weighs 220 pounds, and is one of the fastest big men in the game. He's been one of the league's most durable players, missing only three games in eight years. In 1935, Cal Hubbard, 260-pound Green Bay tackle, fell on his ankle and he was out of one game. In 1936 a Chicago Bears' blocker crashed into his side and smashed his ribs and he had to miss two games. In practically every other game he's played 55 to 60 minutes.

Galento's Pilot Spurns $10,000 Offer

Jacobs Calls Waxman Bid for Burman Bout Publicity Stunt; Seeks But Three Fights

Baltimore, Dec. 9 (AP).—Tony Galento can have $10,000—exclusive of the purse—if he wants to accept a bout with Red Burman, Baltimore heavyweight.

The $10,000—as an outright gift—was offered by Max Waxman, manager of the Baltimore fighter said today.

He said it would be handed to Galento the minute he steps into a ring with Burman.

Waxman, who piloted three Baltimore boys—Joe Dundee, Vince Dundee, and Harry Jeffra—to world titles, now is business manager for Jack Dempsey.

Offer Is Viewed As Publicity Stunt

St. Louis, Dec. 9 (AP).—Joe Jacobs, manager of Tony Galento, showing better footwork than his barrel-chested fighter, today deftly sidestepped an offer of $10,000 and a share of the purse for a match with Max Waxman's heavyweight, Red Burman, of Baltimore.

"I believe Waxman is just looking for publicity for Burman," Jacobs said. Waxman, in Baltimore, offered to give Galento a gift of $10,000 the minute he stepped into the ring with Burman.

Jacobs explained that Galento was only interested in three fights right now—a return match with Otis Thomas in Newark next month, a bout with Max Baer in Atlantic City next February, and "then a crack at Joe Louis in the summer for the world championship."

The Orange, N. J., bartender-battler knocked out Thomas in the ninth round of a scheduled 12-round meeting here Wednesday night. Jacobs said the Newark return bout had been arranged tentatively.

Russell Murphy, chairman of the Missouri State athletic commission, disclosed Thomas was ahead on points when Galento slipped through his guard and felled him with a mighty wallop to the midsection. Judges Al Graff and Bob Dana had Thomas leading, 44 points to 36, when Galento's knockout stopped the fight. Referee Walter Heisner's card had Thomas leading, 42 to 38. Galento lost three rounds on fouls.

Jacobs, Galento and his trainer, Jimmy Frain, leave here by plane at 6:10 p. m. for Minneapolis, stopping off two hours in Chicago en route. Tony will referee wrestling matches in Sioux Falls, Iowa, next Wednesday and in Duluth, Minn., Thursday, and then will fight a four-round exhibition in Minneapolis Friday.

G. U. Prep Opens Season, Beating Rockvile, 17-15

Led by Louis Wimsatt and George Bently, who scored ten points between them, Georgetown Prep opened its basketball season yesterday with a 17-15 win over Richand Montgomery High, of Rockville. Both teams employed a zone defense which proved to be very effective as can be seen by the comparatively low score. The Preps were hampered by their inexperience, having practiced only a week.

Tommy Ray, of Richard Montgomery, was high point man of the game with eight points.

Local Cager Becomes Dad Just Before Game

Arthur Zahn, Heurich dribbler, had good reason for being a trifle nervous and over-anxious last night against the Philadelphia Spahs, for Mrs. Zahn presented him with a 7-pound, 9-ounce son at George Washington Hospital about an hour before game time.

Zahn delayed his arrival at the gym long enough to greet the heir apparent, arriving just in time for the game. Both mother and baby were reported doing well last night.

Demonstration of Spahs' Scoring Act Against Brewers

Sphas Defeat Local Cagers by 43 to 36

Former League Champs Outplay Heurich Lead 15 to 8 and End of First Half Schonfeld Tops Scoring With 17 Points

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Apparently bothered by bunions, the Heurich Brewers took it on the whiskers again last night, bowing to the Philadelphia Spahs by a 43-34 score. It was their fourth consecutive setback in American League competition.

Elmer Ripley's pupils held the advantage briefly early in the first period, but it dwindled like milady's bank account as time and the Spahs marched on. Twice in the second stanza Washington overtook Philadelphia—at the 21-all mark and again at 23-all, but the visitors recoiled from this mild letdown with a burst of scoring power that completely bewildered and disarmed their hosts.

Hosts Outpulayed

Heurich's was woefully outplayed by the smooth functioning Spah machine, particularly in the last chukker, when it successfully "froze" the ball to prevent Washington scoring. The Brewers were rugged individuals, and insisted on dribbling the length of the court to try a shot unassisted. Somebody sounded the warning midway in the initial period and it was every man for himself.

Mickey Schonfeld led both teams in scoring with 17 points, and managed to keep his mates in the running until the last stanza. For the Spahs, it was "Inky" Lautman's keen eye that provided most of the scores. He contributed 16 points and was the primer that kept the Phillies scoring pump at top production. It was the second time this season the Spahs whipped Washington. They took the first game in comfortable style on their home floor.

Nip-and-Tuck Game

It was a nip-and-tuck fray for the first few minutes, with Schonfeld and Ed Hargaden getting the Brewers off to small leads of 2-0, 4-3 and 8-6. But Rosenberg, Lautman and Rosan soon found the range for Philadelphia and knotted the count at 8-all. Then, with Lautman contributing three field goals and Rosenberg a foul, the Spahs prodded their total to 15, while holding their hosts scoreless.

Kaselman and Rosan added 3 points on a field goal and foul as the second period opened, but Schonfeld, Goldfaden, Hargaden and Kweller more than matched this as the Brewers pulled up within a point of the eventual winners, trailing by a 17-16 margin. Rosen's field goal and foul sent the Ppahs' score to 21 before Schonfeld sank two long ones to tie it at 21-all, and after Goldman sank another for Philly, Hargaden matched it with one for the Brewers to make it 23-all.

At this juncture Lautman drew a bead on the basket, and when the period ended Philadelphia held a 29-23 advantage. Schonfeld took it upon himself to put Heurich's back in the battle as the fourth period opened, but when Lautman and Rosan caught the District club on two sleeper scoring plays the Brewers' defense collapsed and the Spahs waltzed home.

In a preliminary game the Trans-Lux Hour Glass five nosed out the District Firemen, 32-31.

G. W. Meets Buckeyes

Colonials Invade Columbus Tonight For Cage Game

Precedent of three years' standing will be against George Washington University's basketball team tonight when it opens its session against Ohio State at Columbus.

This is the fourth game between the two schools. The home team has won each of the others. Last season the Colonials defeated the Buckeyes here, 45 to 35. The previous year Ohio State won at Columbus. G. W. was victorious in 1935.

Minus their star center, Jack Butterworth, who is still recovering from a collapsed lung, the Colonials entrained for Columbus last night and were to arrive there this afternoon.

G. W.'s tentative starting line-up includes Bob Faris, the team's leading scorer last season, and Reds Auerbach, at forwards; George Barber and Sid Silkowitz, at guards, and either "Biff" Borden or Eddie Amendola in Butterworth's place at center.

The absence of the 6-foot-4-inch Butterworth greatly minimizes George Washington's chances of defeating Ohio State, which is rated highly in the Western Conference. The Buckeyes, with a veteran squad led by Jimmy Hull, All-Western Conference forward, have hopes of a Big Ten championship.

This afternoon Bill Reinhart, Colonial coach and one of the East's better coaches, will lecture at a clinic of high school and basketball coaches and will use members of the G. W. squad to demonstrate the proper way to execute fundamentals of shooting, passing and defensive play.

McLeod Wins At Augusta

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 9 (AP).—Fred McLeod, 56-year-old Washington, D. C., professional, carded an 8-over-par 80 today to nose out Otto Hackbarth, Cincinnati, in the 18-hole play-off of the Annual Seniors' Golf Tournament.

Hackbarth finished with an 82 in the match played over the Augusta National Course.

The pair was tied up at 154 after the completion yesterday of the second 18 holes of the 36-hole event. Play originally had been scheduled for 54 holes, but the number was reduced after rain prevented play the first day.

Company 'F' Beats Coast Artillery

Company F defeated 260th Coast Artillery, 38-36, last night on the losers' floor.

Calhoun, with 10 points, led the winners' attack and Van Pelt turned in a fine floor game for the soldiers.

Sunday afternoon Company F will meet Battery C at Fort Myer at 3 o'clock.

Veteran Court Material Disappoints Tech Coach

Little Bruce Kessler Wishes His Stars Would Show More Interest; Tech to Play 16 Games

One high school basketball coach who isn't so pleased with the wealth of seasoned material anxious to play for his club is Bruce Kessler, diminutive mentor of Tech's netters. He turned from what must have been a disappointing drill with last year's first stringers yesterday, remarking that as far as he was concerned the whole lot could be chucked out the window. That, however, was only his graphic way of putting it.

"Honestly, though," he said, "they're getting too much fun out of practice. They ought to be more serious." He proceeded to take the squad apart, man by man. "Vic De Leon, there, was a hard worker last year. I figured that with his added stature and weight, he ought to be a sensation this season. Maybe he will be, but he doesn't show it now. The same goes for Charley Kendall and Eli Blank. Why, Blank was really a mainstay in 1937-38, but he isn't using his head now. We'll have to see how Sam Gendelman develops."

Coach Kessler then turned to a crop of youngsters, out for the team for the first time. Jack Walsh, a third-semester lad up from Taft Junior High, he rated only slightly better than Buddy Edwards, the husky youth who won the Department of Playgrounds junior tennis tournament in a walk this year. If Marshall Dellinger, who played part of last year for Tech, develops a bit of aggression, Kessler believes he will be a fine player. Moe Shul-

Club Denies Deal; Ready To Bargain

Griffith Want Pitchers And Will Try to Make Trade; Isn't Interested In Cash Phase

Zeke Bonura, the gay first baseman from New rleans, this morning finds himself no longer a member of the Washington Nationals, but a large hunk of bait dangling from the end of a trading line manipulated by Prexy Clark Griffith.

Three magic words from President Will Harridge, of the American League, yesterday gave Griffith permission to bait his line with the irrepressible Italian.

"He wasn't claimed," Harridge reported.

"Good," Griff replied. "I am now going to market."

All indications pointed to a deal with the New York Giants if the "Old Fox" can get what he wants. Griffith indicated last night that no deal had been negotiated with the Giants, nor would be unless he was completely satisfied with the players allotted him. He said he would dunk his line, Bonura and all, in the trading pool at next week's winter meeting of the executives at New York, fish for a good strike.

May Negotiate Other Deals

To replace Bonura in the Washington infield, the club president pointed out that Manager Bucky Harris could try Jimmy Wasdell—a whirlwind in the American Association before he came up to the big time, or a newcomer by the name of Jim Vernon. Vernon, a 6-foot 1-inch southpaw, spent last season with Greenville in the South Atlantic League, hanging up a .319 batting mark. Wasdell shared first base with Bonura last season when Zeke went into a tailspin, and also played a game or two in the outfield.

Griffith also said he may negotiate another deal or two while in New York, but professed to have no idea whom he might dispose of or which players he might try to obtain. He was uncertain about Al Simmons' future with the Nats, and preferred not to discuss the matter.

Among those slated to go to camp with the club in February is the Cuban, Bobby Estalella, who had a brief fling here. Estalella's hitting was good, but his fielding under par, and when he showed signs of slowing down at the plate, he was shipped back to Chattanooga, in the Southern Association.

Made Good in Piedmont

But last year in the Piedmont League Estalella massaged the apple for a .351 percentage, which awoke Griffith with a start and induced him to give him another chance.

Bonura's brief stay with Washington was an unhappy one. A steady and long distance hitter with the White Sox, with whom he broke into the majors, Zeke never healy hit his tride in the National Capital. This, coupled with his fielding, which never was flashy, brought him into disfavor with both Bucky Harris and Griffith.

The baggy-panted baseman did help needle new life into the club and spectators, and his home run duel with Simmons—which saw Goose Goslin's old park record totter, kept the fans streaming through the turnstiles until the end of the season. Bonura batted .291 for the season, bringing up his percentage with a batting spree in the closing stages of the race. He hit 22 homers.

In 1937 with Chicago, Bonura batted .345.

Nats Want Pitchers

Griffith has been in communication with Bill Terry, manager of the Giants, who avowedly would like to have Bonura for his right-hand batting power, but denied that they had reached agreement. He scoffed at talk that Washington would accept $20,000 for Bonura in a straight cash deal, and emphatically said the Nats want players—preferably pitchers.

Veteran observers never doubted that Bonura would leave Washington, in view of Harris' anxiety to improve the fielding at first base, and possibly the hitting, but thought the White Sox might block any deal Griff attempted to make. The Sox, they pointed out, were afraid the Cubs might obtain Bonura, who was extremely popular with Windy City fans.

New York's trade with the Cubs earlier in the week evidently set Chisox officials' mind at ease, however, paving the way for Bonura's exit from the league.

Florida Coach Takes Position at L. S. U.

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 9 (AP).—H. R. (Red) Sanders, former Vanderbilt quarterback and for the past season freshman football coach under Josh Cody at the University of Florida, today was added to the Louisiana State University coaching staff as a backfield coach.

Head Coach Bernie Moore announced the appointment in a telephone message from Gainesville, Fla., where he is attending the Southeastern conference meeting.

Sanders played football at Vanderbilt in 1924, 1925 and 1926. He first served as backfield coach with Cody at Clemson and followed Cody to Florida.

Coach Zuppke Urges 'Legimate Proselyting'

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 9 (AP).—Coach Robert C. Zuppke said today what University of Illinois football needs is some "legitimate proselyting by alumni.

"Sure, there's legitimate proselyting," he told a luncheon club. "It's going on all the time by organizations and even churches. I've noticed that great football material is developed at colleges whose stadiums aren't yet paid for. We've paid for our stadium, and this year we had only 40 freshmen out for football."

Of his "critics," the veteran coach said:

"These critics put themselves up as judges when they are no more qualified to judge football than I am, after five or six trips each fall, to judge the work of the engineering or commerce schools of the university."

Generals Will Open Court Season on December 20

Arlington, Va., Dec. 10.—Basketeers of Washington-Lee have a grueling basketball season in store this year, release of the 1938-1938 schedule last night revealed. Twenty-three games have been arranged for the Little Generals, beginning with a clash with Fredericksburg, Va., on December 20.

Only three of last year's lettermen have returned to pace Washington-Lee's squad this season. They are Bob Howell, Alex Anderson and Ted Copeland. The rest of the team will consist of green material with two or three more years to play.

The 1938-1939 schedule follows:

December 20, Fredericksburg at Washington-Lee, 8 p. m.; 21, Falls Church at Washington-Lee, 8 p. m.

January 4, Charles Town, W. So Stack was sent in to kick off. His boot went 15 yards and he was the first fellow to reach the receiver. He took a dive at him and came up with the ball in his arms.

There was a heated argument. The Dartmouth player claimed Stack had stolen the ball after he was down. The Yale center just grinned and pointed to the fact that he had possession of the ball when the referee arrived. And the referee was in a dilemma. Finally he called on the field judge for help.

"What do you think," the referee asked, pointing dramatically to the two boys lying on the ground.

"I think I'll go in and get a shower," the field judge yawned. "The game's over."

Redskin Ace Will Assist Tex Tilson

Appointment Awaits Okay of Trustees; Plans to Study Law At University

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., Dec. 9.—Riley Smith, quarterback for the Washington Redskins and former Alabama star, has been added to the Washington and Lee University staff as backfield coach, it was announced today.

The appointment is subject to final approval by the Washington and Lee board of trustees.

Played in Rose Bowl

In 1934, Smith quarterbacked the Alabama team against Stanford in the Rose Bowl. He played in two all-star games in 1936, the East-West game in San Francisco, as captain of the East eleven, and the All-Star game in Chicago as leader of the College All-Stars.

The new W. and L. backfield mentor also made his monogram three years in track at Alabama as a discus thrower. He still holds the record there of 138 feet.

Tilson Is Head Coach

Washington and Lee Athletic Director Richard A. Smith last week announced that Warren E. (Tex) Tilson had been reappointed for two more years as head coach. The reappointment is subject to the approval of the faculty committee on athletics and the board of trustees.

Tilson has been head coach at Washington and Lee since the 1933 season. His Generals won the Southern Conference championship in 1934.

W. & L. officials indicated that Smith would be an addition to the staff, and that the present assistants, Bill Ellis and Gene White, would be retained.

Appointment No Surprice To Redskins' Officials

The appointment of Riley Smith as backfield coach at Washington and Lee University was no surprise to the Redskins, General Manager Jack Espey telephones The Post from New York last night.

The former All-American quarterback at Alabama, who was hampered all last season by injuries, had been looking for a coaching post for some time and had informed Owner George Marshall of his intentions to leave the pro ranks, Espey said.

Smith, a 200-pound back who was noted chiefly for his ability to block and kick points after touchdowns, played three years with the Redskins, his most successful season being last year when he was a big factor in their late drive to the Eastern division championship.

O'Brien Selected On Collier's Team

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Unbeaten Texas Christian University and Cornell placed two men each on Collier's All-America football team, selected by Grantland Rice, and announced today.

The Horned Frogs placed their pass-slinging quarterback, David O'Brien, and Ki Aldrich, great defensive center. Cornell men named were A. Sidney Roth at guard and William McKeever at tackle.

The team:

Tackles—Joseph Edward Beinor, Notre Dame, and William McKeever, Cornell.

Guards—Ralph Heikkinen, Michigan, and A. Sidney Roth, Cornell.

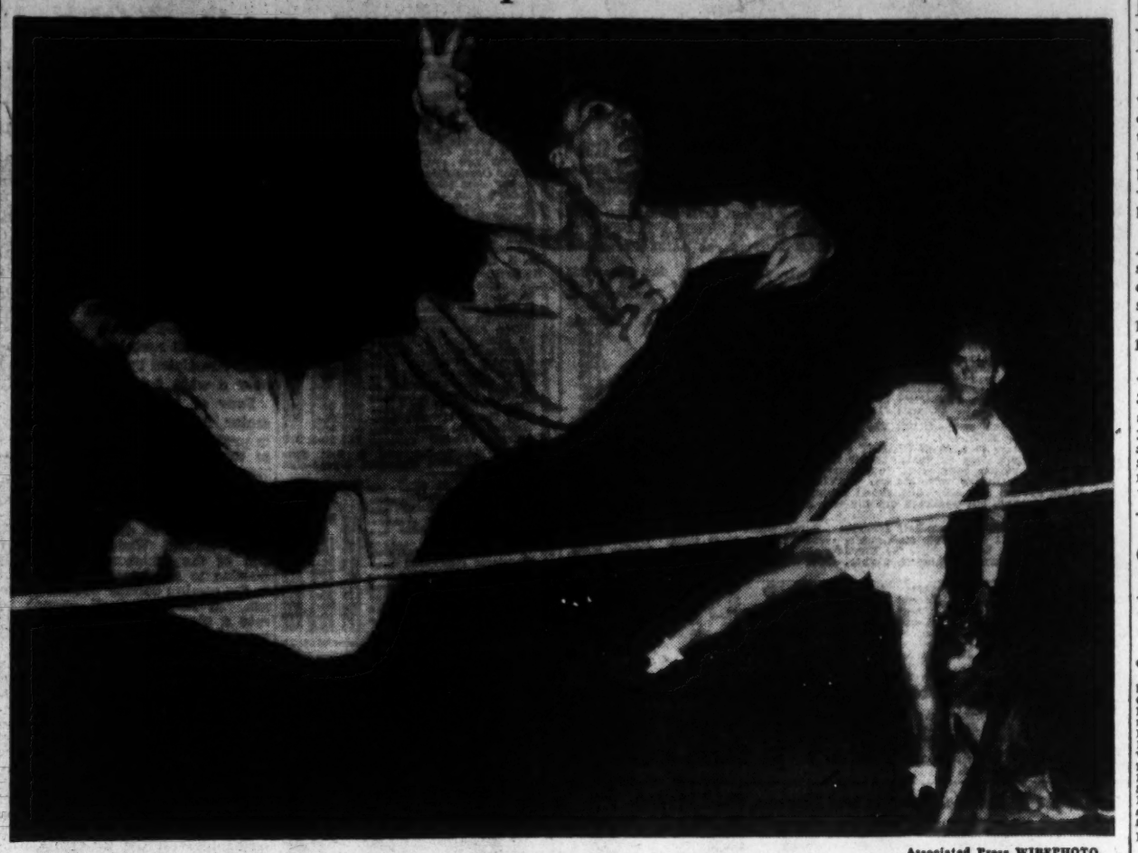
Center—Ki Aldrich, Texas Christian.

Quarterback—David O'Brien, Texas Christian.

Halfbacks—Robert MacLeod, Dartmouth, and Vic Bottari, California.

Fullback — Marshall Goldberg, Pittsburgh.

Blind Athlete Surprises Pitt Track Coaches



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Though blind since his high school football days, Bill Kelley, freshman, is determined to win a berth on the University of Pittsburgh track and field team as a high jumper. Here Kelley is shown clearing the bar in a workout yesterday as his coach, Pete Bennett, and his "seeing eye" dog look on. Bennett seems to be giving his blind charge a bit of help with his right leg. Coaches say the blind athlete has one of the best springs they've seen and marvel at his determination to succeed despite his handicap. He averages 5 feet 5 inches a jump. A football injury in high school cost Kelley his sight

Rockville A. C. Boys to Meet All-American Girls' Team

Mixed Basketball Game at Rockville Monday to Be Played According to Boys' Rules

The first mixed basketball game of any consequence ever to be held in this vicinity will be staged at Rockville Monday, December 12, when the Rockville A. C. boys unlimited team meets Olson's All-American Red Heads, world's champion girls five.

The game will be played according to boys' rules. Admission is 50 cents.

Boasting five girls who stand better than 6 feet, Olson's Red Heads, an amateur group of All-American girls, are touring the East as they did last season when they played more than 180 games, winning more than they lost.

Rockville A. C. has for years been one of the strongest amateur fives in this vicinity. Last season it won 40 games, lost seven. To date this year, it has annexed six games against a single defeat. Rockville wil be able to match the Red Heads in height—at least—for five of its players also are over 6 feet in height.

Rockville's starting line-up will be chosen from among, Fred Lanier, Hershy Hershberger, Jack Markland, Sully Mills, Karl Becker, Bob Lee, Bucky Anders, Blackie Stearn and Lambert Durbin.

The Red Heads will use Kay Kirkpatrick, Texas; Peggy Lawson, Oklahoma; Hazel Vickers, Oklahoma; Gladys Lommler, Ohio; Lila Blue, Ohio; Hazel Smith, Connecticut, and Rush Osburn, Missouri.

McKeesport Gets Orange Bowl Game

Miami, Fla., Dec. 9 (AP).—The McKeesport High School football team, western Pennsylvania champion, was invited today today to play a Christmas Day game in the Orange Bowl here against a Miami eleven.

Teams throughout the country had sought the bid. Among the others considered were Peabody, Mass., and East High, of Aurora, Ill. McKeesport lost its opening game of the season to Massillon, Ohio, 19-7, but won its other 10 games. It has not been defeated by a Pennsylvania team since 1934.

The local team will be decided by a game December 19 between Miami and Miami Edison high schools. They played to a 6-6 tie for the city championship three weeks ago and both had previously been defeated.

Reds Send Moore To Indianapolis

New Orleans, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds announced today Dee Moore, catcher, had been optioned to Indianapolis of the American Association.

The Indianapolis club announced the purchase of Outfield Bob Loane from Durham of the Piedmont League.

Toles Beats Barlund

Detroit Boxer Fails To Impress in N. Y. Debut; Gets Verdict

New York, Dec. 9.—Roscoe Toles threw right hand shots at Gunnar Barlund's head with the greatest of ease for ten solid rounds tonight to outpoint the Finnish heavyweight before a crowd of 4,711 in the Hoppodrome. Toles weighed 196¾, Barlund 197½.

Despite the one-sided victory, the rangy Detroit Negro's New York debut was none too impressive, largely because he was considerably pained by any kind of a punch to the mid-section, and because he couldn't even come close to setting his rival on the floor, although he had him in trouble almost from the first round on.

For Barlund, this second straight defeat eliminated him from the ranks of the up-and-coming heavyweights. He was bloody and cut almost from the first minute. Tonight's setback, coming on top of his recent loss to Lou Nova, the California clouter, removed him in a hurry from the ranks of contenders for Joe Louis' crown.

If all the right-hand punches Toles tossed at Barlund's face throughout the contest were laid end to end, they would pave the Lincoln highway. And from start to finish, the Finn was unable to get away from these long hooks. One of them drew crimson from his nose in the first heat, another gashed him over the right eye in the second, opening an old wound.

It wasn't until the third, when Barlund found out his rival didn't like punches "downstairs," that he finally showed signs of opposition. He began to shoot right hooks and uppercuts to Toles' stomach and the Negro winced and drew up his leg each time one connected. But when the round was all over, Referee Billy Kavanaugh took it away from the stolid Finn for what he said was low punching.

The Associated Press score card gave Barlund only one round. There were no signs of a knockdown all the way, and Toles' only apparent hurt was a slight cut on his forehead.

Toles slipped to the canvas in the fifth after missing a right swing, but was up again without a count. He did the same thing in the tenth, and again bobbed up immediately. Barlund also slipped once, in the ninth, but he too jumped right to his feet.

Bears Will Begin Practice Monday For Georgia Tech

Berkeley, Calif., Dec. 9 (AP).—University of California football players, struggling with final examinations, will begin to straggle out to the practice field next Monday to begin preparations for the game with Georgia Tech here December 26.

Meanwhile, Coach Leonard (Stub) Allison, of the Bears, was studying scout reports obtained after Tech's contest with Georgia. His conclusions were that the Southerners played a brand of ball which would prove tough for California.

"I'm not forgetting Georgia Tech whipped us in 1936 when we were 3-to-1 favorites and had a club as strong, if not more so, that this year's," he said. "They've had us scouted in nearly every game this season. I know, because their representative, an old Notre Dame man, was around here most of the time."

20 Players On District Team's List

Holm, O'Mara Among Men Selected; O'Brien Picked by Eagles; Goldberg to Cards

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 9.—The Washington Redskins, runners-up for the Eastern championship of National Professional Football League, this afternoon drafted Eric Tipton, Duke University punting star, and I. B. Hale, giant tackle from Texas Christian University, among the 20 players allowed under the rules.

In view of the fact that it was the third last club to choose because of its high finish in the race, Washington fared well in the annual division of collegiate talent, emerging from the round table huddle with 11 backs, a center, 2 guards and 6 tackles. In Hale, a 246-pounder, the Skins obtained the No. 1 star of their affections. Both George Marshall, club president, and Coach Ray Flaherty, had set their hearts on obtaining the big fellow to head the new 1939 talent.

A Brilliant Punter

Tipton, although thirteenth on Washington's list, is regarded as one of the prize catches because of his brilliant punting. The outstanding hero in Duke's 7-0 conquest of Pittsburgh, Tipton will be joined on the roster by Bob O'Mara, 195 ball-toting halfback and his running mate.

Included on the Redskin list were Tony Holm, of Alabama; Steve Slivinski and Al Kruver, University of Washington; Bob Hoffman and Boyd Morgan, U. S. C., and Paul Smith, 225-pound tackle from St. Benedict's College, Kansas.

It is noteworthy that Marshall Goldberg, Pittsburgh's All-America fullback, was the No. 1 selection of no team. He was picked second on the Chicago Cardinals' list, and assigned to that club.

Under the rules Pittsburgh and the Cardinals, the two lowest ranking teams, had first choice in each selection round, followed in order by Cleveland, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, the Bears, Detroit, Washington, Green Bay and New York. Washington bid for Davey O'Brien, who went to Philadelphia, and Ki Aldrich, who was chosen by the Cardinals.

List of Players

Backs—Tony Holm, Alabama; Dick Todd, Texas A. and M.; Dave Anderson, California; Wilbur Moore, Minnesota; Jim Johnston, University of Washington; Jim German, Centre; Bob O'Mara, Duke; Bob Hoffman, U. S. C.; Eric Tipton, Duke; Boyd Morgan, U. S. C.; Al Kruver, University of Washington. Tackles—Bob Russell, Auburn; I. B. Hale, T. C. U.; Dick Farman, Washington State; Clyde Shugart, Iowa State; Paul Smith, St. Benedict's; Al Coop, Centre. Guards—Steve Slivinski, University of Washington; Al Kuber, Villanova. Center—Quinton Lumpkin.

Morris Griner Wins, Pays $8.40

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Dec. 9 (AP).—Morris Griner, owned by Mrs. Ivan H. Parke, won the Garnet purse, which featured the Fair Grounds program this afternoon. Coming from behind under a well-timed ride by Delpha Castile, Kaplan, La., Morris Griner passed Mrs. Ed Haughton's Glasby and won by a neck in a thrilling drive. O. L. Foster's Casinghead was a bang-up third.

The winner paid $8.40 for $2.

Morris Griner kept close to the early pace which was set by Glasby, Casinghead and then Swift Spot. Glasby took the lead from Swift Spot in the last quarter of the mile-and-sixteenth race and came down to the wire the seeming winner. But Morris Griner moved steadily upon him and in the closing strides passed him out. Casinghead held on gamely to third place and Unparalled finished strong to be fourth.

Cold, but clear, weather did not keep down the attendance, which was augmented by visitors here for the baseball convention.

Canrock Drives to Thrilling Victory in Charles Town Race

Bill Bennings
At the Post

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al,

Jockey Herbie Lauch was suspended for three days for disobedience at the post in the second race. The stewards announced that J. Cohen has been denied the privileges of the track "for practices detrimental to the best interest of racing."

The horse Bellthorn was claimed yesterday by G. H. Pearce. S. H. Rogers has purchased Crusand.

Al Boyle, president and general manager of this track, said yesterday that he was going to install a movie camera on the starting gate here next year. The pictures will be developed and projected at a meeting of the stewards the next morning. Just when the track crew had some hopes of improving running conditions, the rain popped up again. Donald Hay, in charge of the wagering here, will handle the mutuel department at the new Hollywood (Fla.) track.

Sam Finkelstein was unhappy yesterday following the departure of his friend, Whitey Wilson, for Florida. R. S. Kaufman, secretary-treasurer of the local jockey club has returned from Pennsylvania. T. C. Bradley, chief steward here, goes to New Orleans at the conclusion of the meeting. The Waterford Downs Track, to be constructed on the other side of West Virginia, will be a mile-track with all modern trimmings. Plans for the plant have been drawn up. The new course is on a State road just over the line from Wellsville, Ohio, and has railroad facilities. Al Boyle is the guiding light in the new venture.

Horses are being obtained here for the Hollywood and Havana meetings. R. V. Parsons has purchased the horse Packaway. Artist and Teddy's Star turned in good workouts here yesterday morning. Today's feature with Unheralded, Ocean Roll, The Runner and others due to face the starter looms as an interesting race. It is the Shenandoah Handicap with $1,000 added. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Tempting Witch was second to one of the best sprinters on the grounds and previously was a winner. Likes this abbreviated route and I see no reason for mistakes. Teddy's Star would like more distance but is fit and ready. Doctor C. N. would be a factor if in action.

Second race—Moths Wing, prepared here on this track, may find this company right and I look for a set of brackets. Philigal won impressively last out and is dangerous. Dixie Torch for the show award.

Third race—Pegadette likes the mud and the route suits. This one needs only the right handling. Peter H. turned in a fine effort in that recent outing and should be a keen contender. Center March to take care of the others.

Fourth race—My Blonde turned in a fine performance earlier in the meeting and seems nicely placed in this field. A. O'Connell is a veteran with speed and should be prominent. Little Wackie is fit.

Fifth race—Unheralded seems capable of giving away weight to this kind. He will get a change of riders and is in new hands. Ocean Roll runs honest races but I don't believe he can handle the top one at the weights. Tedmelia showed enough improvement last out to indicate that better things are coming.

Sixth race—Bosopi galloped along in front of cheaper company. This marathon jumper favors the one time jumper and I'm going to string along. Suntosun is a front runner of class and is the one to beeat. Strophe won his last.

Seventh race—Pick Out made a dozen moves and was a fast closing second in that recent outing. With better handling this one will score. Match Point loves the track and comes off a good effort. Chief Evergreen for the show end.

Sub races—If the first is used I'll take Trixie Lass, Lapis and Dark Tyrant. If the second goes, I'll take Free, Chillie Ebbie and Bungalow.

Best bet—Unheralded.

Macon Sells Pitcher

New Orleans, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Macon club of the South Atlantic League today announced the sale of Mack Stewart, pitcher, to Brooklyn. It was expected Stewart would be sent to Montreal or Elmira, Brooklyn farm clubs. Stewart won 28 games for Macon in 1938.

Castabout Beaten Out In Stretch

Victor Pays $34.60 Ticket; Miss Epe Third; Day's Double Brings $117 Price

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 9.—The good people of Charles Town had reason to celebrate following the running of the fourth race here today. Canrock, a 5-year-old gelding, owned by Dr. D. B. Langdon of this section, drove to a thrilling victory over Mrs. T. H. Andrews' Castabout. Miss Epe, in the colors of Mrs. G. Hutchinson, was third.

It was the pay off price of $34.60 that caused the natives to cheer. The money people from Washington and Baltimore backed the chances of Sally Quick, Pierre Andre, Dixie S. and others, leaving Canrock and Castabout long shots. However, it was entirely a two-horse race.

Jockey Lou Machado, the riding champion of the meeting, took Castabout away from the gate as if he meant business. However, Canrock kept close up. Machado kept pumping into the stretch but along came Canrock to challenge and then go to the front. His lead was short but he held it, under the drive of Jockey W. Kirk.

The daily double brought a nice return of $117. The two key horses paid better than 8-1. Dunitra started the ball rolling by taking the second race at an $18.80 payoff, with Morvim scoring in the third race at $18.60.

Despite the heavy track, the racing was good throughout the afternoon with the camera being called into action on some position in virtually every race.

Engle's Lad, with Machado up, took the day's opener at a $9 mutuel. The son of Groucher caught Flying Heart in the closing stages to win going away. Prairie Man came out of the clouds to be third.

Individual, a fair 3-year-old, proved that a vacation since last spring did not affect her speed. She answered Jockey A. Vessel's drive to set most of the pace in the fifth race and won easily from Bo Dean and Postponement.

Never Idol, paying $10.50, scored an easy victory in the seventh race. With Apprentice Jockey J. Mattison in the saddle, the 7-year-old mare came from behind to win by four lengths. El Bailarino was second and Welsh Lad, third. Jockey Lou Machado was tossed off Lady Grandace and escaped with a mud bath.

Sea Boy, with Apprentice D. West doing the booting, won the sixth event and paid $37.50. Crusand and Mantados were closest at the finish.

Birmingham Buys Kansas Catcher

New Orleans, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Birmingham Club, Southern Association, today announced the purchase of Catcher John Pruitt from Hutchinson, Kansas.

Atlanta of the Southern Association purchased Charles Bruster, second baseman, from Evansville, Ind.

Louisville of the American Association announced the purchase of Catcher Eldon (Bid) Breese from Kansas City of the American circuit.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENGLE'S LAD, $9.00, $5.80, $4.00; FLYING HEART, $12.00, $6.80; PRAIRIE MAN, $13.40.

ENGLE'S LAD, first away and closest to pace of FLYING HEART, came around on outside of leader to challenge and under vigorous handling, was up in closing strides. FLYING HEART had speed to go to front in opening furlong, saved ground, but could not resist winner while under punishment. PRAIRIE MAN dropped back soon after start, moved up with bold rush, but hung in closing test. GROUCHER'S BOY made up ground. ASTERISK could not keep up. LITTLE HARPIST and DAISY PETAL had some early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:05. Off 2:06½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUNRITA, $18.80, $9.00, $6.80; WHICH BLOND, $9.00, $4.60; NATIONAL, $5.60.

DUNRITA, closest to pace of CLARET PUNCH from break, came wide into stretch to get to front and hung on gamely under intermittent punishment. WHICH BLOND, slow to begin and far back to stretch, came with terrific rush on inside and would have been winner a few strides. NATIONAL was squeezed back going to first turn, saved ground thereafter and closed willingly. CLARET PUNCH had good early speed, saved ground, but weakened nearing end. BELLTHORN was held safe. FLITTING FENG had early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:33½. Winner, Dallas J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORVIM, $18.60, $9.20, $5.20; LOCOMOTIVE, $6.80, $3.80; SHERIFF EUGENE, $3.60.

MORVIM, within striking distance from start, moved up boldly along backstretch, rallied to strong drive in stretch to take command and drew out nicely. LOCOMOTIVE went in thick of early contention, took command at first turn, set good pace, but could not resist winner. SHERIFF EUGENE was off poorly and made up some ground. BALANCED BUDGET had no chance with the start and closed gamely. LADY BUCK and SPARKLING stopped.

Daily Double, Dunrita and Morvim, Paid $117.00.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00½. Off 3:06. Winner, B. B. Langdon's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANROCK, $34.60, $16.20, $5.60; CASTABOUT, $9.40, $5.60; MISS EPE, $3.20.

CANROCK, forced pace of CASTABOUT from start, came around leader in early stretch and was kept to hard drive to end. CASTABOUT took lead under hustling tactics, was hard ridden and held on gamely. MISS EPE, shuffled back going to first turn, gained some ground. SALLY QUICK was off poorly, went to contention and faltered. WHITE EWEETS had speed in spots. PIERRE ANDRE was through at far turn. DIXIE S. was held safe.

FIFTH RACE (substitute)—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:32½. Off 3:33. NEVER IDOL worked way to contention, came between horses with bold rush to take command and won easily. EL BAILARINO was forward factor from start and closed gamely. WELSH LAD came through on inside to take lead, but faltered in stretch.

Sen. Walsh Terms Schedules Of Service Teams 'Snobbish'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 9.—Charges that "radical professors" were behind current moves to de-emphasize college sports were coupled today by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, with a proposal that the Army and Naval Academy teams play games in all sections of the country.

Declaring he had a special interest in the Naval Academy because he is chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, the veteran New England Senator said in an interview that present athletic schedules for the service teams appear "snobbish."

"Annapolis and West Point belong to the whole country," he said, "and their teams ought to play in the South, on the Pacific Coast and in every other section of the country and not select big games year after year with the same little group of schools."

He suggested the service schools should not play any team two years in a row, except for so-called "practice games" with small schools.

The Senator took issue with a recent magazine article by President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, who advocated games "in which all students can play," 10-cent admissions for football, and requirements that coaches hold academic teaching positions.

Walsh said "intra-mural sport has its place in colleges" but that the big intersectional and intercollegiate contests tended to destroy "sectional, racial and class distinction."

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 9 (AP).—The possibility that Navy football teams might play in distant sections of the country as suggested by Senator David I. Walsh appeared remote today as Navy and most major Eastern schools have virtually completed their schedules through 1942.

In past years, suggestions that Navy visit distant gridirons were rejected on scholastic grounds. Midshipmen carry a heavy burden of technical studies and a naval officer's standing on the promotion list is determined by his scholastic standing at graduation.

Past academy executives have suggested an athlete's future career in the Navy might be adversely affected by long trips away from classes and the policy has been to arrange schedules calling for a minimum of travel time.

Freight Traffic Continues Rise Over Year Ago

Total 649,086 Cars
4.6% Above 1937
15.5% Gain in Week

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended December 3 totaled 649,086 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 28,761 cars or 4.6 per cent above the corresponding week in 1937 but a decrease of 51,964 cars or 7.4 per cent below the same week in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of December 3 was an increase of 87,002 cars or 15.5 per cent above the preceding week which contained a holiday.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 254,272 cars, an increase of 30,092 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 12,765 cars above the corresponding week in 1937.

Coal loading amounting to 143,644 cars, an increase of 23,241 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 16,928 cars above the corresponding week in 1937.

Grain Loadings Higher

Grain and grain products loading totaled 35,775 cars, an increase of 6,616 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 1,638 cars below the corresponding week in 1937. The Western Districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week of December 3 totaled 22,014 cars, an increase of 3,706 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 1,043 cars below the corresponding week in 1937.

Livestock loading amounting to 16,681 cars, an increase of 2,912 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 1,527 cars above the corresponding week in 1937. In the Western Districts alone, loading of livestock for the week of December 3, totaled 12,993 cars, an increase of 2,563 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 1,564 cars above the corresponding week in 1937.

Forest products loading totaled 28,743 cars, an increase of 3,155 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 882 cars above the corresponding week in 1937.

Coke loading amounted to 7,927 cars, an increase of 1,169 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 1,775 cars above the corresponding week in 1937.

Six districts—Eastern, Allegheny, Pocahontas, Southern, Northwestern and Central Western—reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1937. The Southwestern district was the only one to report a decrease. The Pocahontas and Northwestern districts also reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1930, although for the other districts there were decreases.

Big Packing Firm Omits Dividend, Shaves Salaries

San Francisco, Dec. 9 (AP).—Stockholders, executives and employes faced effects today of a tightening of the corporation belt by California Packing Corporation. Adverse conditions led to omission of the quarterly dividend on common stock, which had been 25 cents a share the last two quarters, after nearly 4 years of 37½ cents quarterly.

Directors voted to trim executive salaries and temporarily to suspend contributions to the employe annuity plan. Salaries over $4,200 a year were cut 10 to 20 per cent on a sliding scale. Payment of the regular quarterly dividend of 62½ cents a share on preferred stock was ordered.

Balaban & Katz

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Directors of Balaban & Katz, principal theater-owning subsidiary of Paramount Pictures Corporation, operating in the Chicago area, today omitted declaration of a dividend on common stock usually made at this time. A year ago a dividend of $4 a share was ordered. It was said that the company will use surplus earnings to reduce bank loans and other current payables.

National Supply Co.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 9 (AP).—Directors of National Supply Co., manufacturers of oil well equipment today cut in half dividends on two preferred issues and omitted payment on a third. No action was taken on the $2 ten-year preference stock, on which a quarterly payment of 50 cents a share was made on September 30.

So. Ry. to Borrow $6,000,000 More

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Southern Railway Co. yesterday to borrow $6,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to complete its $20,000,000 equipment purchasing program.

The Southern plans to use the new loan to acquire 2,400 all-steel freight cars and 25 all-steel express cars. Recently it has borrowed $14,000,000 from the RFC to acquire 5,724 freight cars and four small Diesel electric trains. It is estimated the new equipment would reduce its annual car hire bill by almost $2,000,000 and reduce maintenance of equipment expenses $350,000 or more annually for at least five years.

Commissioner Claude R. Porter dissented.

Lead Price Reduced 2d Time This Month

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—The American Smelting & Refining Co today reduced the price of lead $2 a ton to a basis of 4.75 cents a pound, New York.

This is the second time this month the metal has been lowered, the first being $3 a ton on December 6.

Cotton Declines With Weakness At Liverpool

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Cotton fell back today under liquidation promoted by renewed easiness in foreign markets. March sold off from 8.16 to 8.10 and closed at 8.12 with final prices 8 to 11 points net lower.

The market opened five to seven points lower under foreign and domestic selling promoted by lower Liverpool cables. December continued under pressure and the market generally lacked support most of the day except for a small volume of trade price fixing on a scale down and some local buying. Prices steadied partially toward the close on a little covering and trade buying.

D. C. Business Only 1 Per Cent Below Normal

U. S. 21% Below
7% Gain in Month
Tops 1937 Figure

New York, Dec. 9.—Washington was one of 33 trading centers where business improved 5 per cent or more in November over October, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the research department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., New York and Detroit advertising concern.

Business in Washington at the end of November stood at 1 per cent below normal, representing a gain of 5 per cent over October. At the close of November, 1937, the city's business index stood at 1 per cent above normal.

"Rapid improvement in business conditions is seen in the rising index figures for key markets the country over," the report states. "Increases in standing were registered in 105 of the 147 principal marketing areas, 23 declined and 19 remained without change. This is the greatest number of areas to show gains since March, 1937."

National Business

National business is now operating at 21 per cent below normal—a gain of 7 per cent below the October standing. In November, 1937, the national index was 22 per cent below normal.

The greatest gains, with the indexes improving 5 per cent or more over October, were registered in the following areas: Aberdeen, Altoona, Augusta, Birmingham, Canton, Cleveland, Columbia (S. C.), Dayton, Detroit, Fargo, Flint, Grand Rapids, Greenville, Jackson (Mich.), Lansing, Lincoln, Manchester, Nashville, Omaha, Oshkosh, Saginaw, San Francisco, Seattle, Sioux City, Sioux Falls, Springfield (Mo), Syracuse, Toledo, Topeka, Washington, Williamsport, Worcester and Youngstown.

Gold Importations $66,322,240 in Week

Gold imports totaled $66,322,240 in the week ended December 2. This amount was the largest since October 28.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that the flow of gold from Europe to the United States had been steadily decreasing from a $206,654,272 weekly peak just after the Czechoslovakian crisis, but was stimulated in the week ended December 2 by the low prices of British and French currency in foreign exchange markets.

Atlas Claims Settled For $3,200,000

Chicago, Dec. 9 (AP).—Federal Judge William Holly approved today a settlement for $3,200,000 of claims totaling $4,200,000 of the Atlas Corporation, New York, against the Utilities Power & Light Corp.

The settlement was proposed by Charles True Adams, trustee of the U. P. L., and had approval of a majority of attorneys in the case. "I am convinced the trustee could not adequately defend himself against these claims," the court said in an oral ruling.

Prices Seek Lower Level in Light Trading
McKesson Situation Casts Cloud
Far East Conditions Are Disturbing

New York, Dec. 9.—Stocks moved narrowly lower again today in restricted trading. The shadow of the McKesson & Robbins case hung above the market and other depressing influences on buying sentiment included unfavorable dividend news, another mark-down in lead prices, tension in the Franco-Italian situation and new suggestion of trouble for the United States in the Far East.

Bonds were highly irregular with foreign sections weak.

European exchanges were dull at fractionally lower levels. Cotton declined 8 to 11 points and wheat was unchanged to one-fourth cent lower. Corn staged an independent rally on development of large export business, finishing ½ to 1⅝ cents higher.

Action of financial markets, in the opinion of a large section of Wall Street, actually reflect the seasonal influences. In industry at this time of year movements are sidewise or moderately lower due to lessened activity as many factories take inventories or make repairs. The majority of the big industries, however, are not only operating at much higher levels than a year ago, but are showing somewhat less than seasonal recessions. Retail sales, according to the Dun & Bradstreet report, are reaching new highs in the pre-Christmas trade, although buyer preference for low-priced goods and articles is more marked than formerly.

An announcement that automobile production for the last week exceeded 100,000 units for the first time in 16 months failed to attract buying to the motor division where prices were shaded somewhat. Utilities suffered relatively the largest losses and metal shares were definitely inclined to soften. Demand for copper whether for domestic use or for export is fitful and recent reductions in zinc and lead prices have induced caution rather than any appreciable amount of new buying.

Low-Priced Stocks Active

Low priced stocks once again accounted for the bulk of activity on the big board, and although total transactions were but 698,960 shares, the market was a fairly broad one, with 802 issues traded, of which 459 declined, against 145 advances. Among new highs was that recorded by International Business Machines, which rose to 180, up 2. General Mills made a small gain, and Hercules Powder equaled its previous 1938 high. Union Carbide was up about a point, while losses of a point or more were noted in Liggett & Myers B, United Fruit, Melville Shoe and Mead preferred.

Transamerica, which continued in the top flight of active stocks, recovered ⅝ of its recent losses, and Pathe Film, also in demand, moved up ¾. Pure Oil and Paramount Pictures were other actives to make a little progress. General Electric was traded freely, but declined.

Sentiment in Wall Street for the next few weeks appeared to be inclined to the bearish side, although a majority in the district still hold that another upswing in shares should get under way soon after the first of the year, depending largely on Congressional moves and the foreign situation.

Preliminary forecasts of next week's steel operations from the various centers point to the usual year-end let-up in production. Announcements by the European steel cartel of somewhat lower prices for both raw and finished iron and steel products for the first half of 1939 in effect partly reflect the more drastic price reductions already in force in the United States.

Treasury Bonds Firm

Treasury securities remained firm in the listed market today, while other departments were irregular. Foreign dollar issues were weak with few exceptions, owing to the increasingly pessimistic reports of European developments. Speculative corporate bonds showed small gains and losses in equal numbers, with local tractions one of the weaker sections. Turnover in all bonds was $7,760,000.

The more indicative issues among Treasury bonds showed gains to four-thirty-seconds of a point, while others drifted idly. The tremendous oversubscription of the new $700,000,000 offering turned attention more to the outstanding obligations. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were quiet, with fractional declines the rule.

Speculative railroad bonds were churned about idly, with the variations important only in a few instances. The RFC announcement of further aid to the Chicago & Eastern Illinois boosted the bonds of that carrier sharply, and Chicago Great Western bonds also improved. Alleghany Corporation bonds were weak, and utility holding issues remained dull. While convertible industrials were uncertain, communications, amusement and other special groups were neglected.

In the foreign section, Italian bonds again were weak, owing to the war crisis in Europe, French bonds hardly appeared on the bond tape, but also receded. German and other European default bonds sold down, as did almost all issues in the Latin-American group. Best grade foreigns joined the downswing.

Treasury Acts To Put an End To 'Free Rides'

Bond Oversubscription Results in Straight Percentage Allotment

Efforts of small-time speculators to make a killing on the new cash securities sold in the Treasury's December 15 financing operation yesterday caused Secretary Morgenthau to allot the new securities to bidders on a straight percentage basis.

This is the first time the Treasury had followed a straight percentage plan. Heretofore, some kind of preferential treatment has been accorded small buyers.

Morgenthau revealed, meanwhile, that the cash offering of $400,000,000 of 22-27 year 2¾ per cent bonds had been more than 14 times oversubscribed, while the cash offering of $300,000,000 of 5-year 1⅛ per cent notes had been more than 12 times oversubscribed.

7% on Bonds, 9% on Notes

Bidders for bonds will be allotted a straight 7 per cent of their bid, while subscribers for notes will receive notes in the amount of 9 per cent of their bid. Adjustments will be made, where necessary, to make the amount allotted come out in denominations of $100.

Subscriptions for the bonds totaled $5,732,000,000, while bids for the notes aggregated $3,646,000,000—a total subscription of $9,378,000,000 for the $700,000,000 of new securities which the Treasury offered to sell.

On the basis of the percentage allotments announced, the Treasury will actually borrow $401,240,000 by allotment of bonds and $328,140,000 by allotment of notes—a total of $729,380,000.

Funny Business in Cemeteries

For the last two years, the Treasury allotted subscriptions up to $1,000 in full. Under this arrangement, subscriptions over $1,000 have been subject to a straight percentage allotment.

On the present occasion, however, the Treasury found an unusually large number of $1,000 subscriptions. Investigation disclosed that cemetery associations had put in $1,000 subscriptions, not only for their members, but for persons buried in the cemetery.

Other examples turned up revealed family trusts putting in $1,000 bids for each member of the family.

"Free Riding" Is Term

The practice of spreading the $1,000 subscriptions is termed "free riding" in bond circles. Treasury agents, in their investigations, tried to weed out cases where the bidder was acting for someone else, or was unable to pay cash for the securities he subscribed for.

With rights to the new bonds selling yesterday at a premium of nearly 2 points, the bidder for $1,000 of the bonds, under a plan where such subscriptions were allotted in full, could sell his rights for a profit of nearly $20 before he received the securities.

He would have a 20 per cent profit on the $100 deposit accompanying his subscription for the $1,000 of bonds.

Experiment Ends

In addition upsetting the "free riders," Morgenthau, by the new allotment policy, has ended an experiment that has been unsuccessful since it was started in 1933. This has been the practice of allotting in full subscriptions up to a certain amount.

At first, subscriptions up to $10,000 were allotted in full. Abuse followed, and the amount was cut to $5,000. Two years ago the figure was reduced to $1,000. Treasury officials did not think there would be any appreciable "free riding" with this total.

New York banking circles, however, recently reported that the number of $1,000 subscriptions for the December 15 issues totaled more than 1,000, while in the past the total had been only a few hundred.

The absormal amount of "free riding" was attributed in some quarters to a recent magazine article by S. F. Porter describing in detail how a person could speculate in Government securities.

RFC Business Loans Now Fewer, Jones Says

Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation said yesterday that there had been a decided decrease in the demand for business loans during the last 90 days. He attributed this to better business.

Jones said that with a brighter business outlook, banks probably were taking care of some of the demand formerly made on RFC. The average small business, he said, does not need very much financing and "banks are glad to make the loans if it appears they will be able to get it back." Since RFC resumed lending activities last February, Jones said a total of 4,825 loans aggregating $837,559,609 had been authorized.

Stock Seat $70,000, Decline of $1,000

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for transfer of a membership in the New York Stock Exchange at $70,000, a decline of $1,000 from the previous sale.

The high price reached this year for an exchange seat was $85,000 on July 15 while a 20-year low was touched at $51,000 on June 15.

Union Pacific to Buy 100,000 Tons of Rails

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—Union Pacific Railroad will buy up to 100,000 tons of steel rails, including fastenings for laying next spring, W. M. Jeffers, president, announced today.

Last year the road did not purchase any new rails. In 1936 it bought 70,000 tons.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended December 3 as approximately 8,450,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 8,267,000 tons; 1936, 10,715,000 tons. Percentage of change: 1937, increase 2.2 per cent; 1936, decrease 21.1 per cent.

Cash Circulation $51.96 Per Person

By the Associated Press.

Coin and currency in American pockets increased 63 cents in November to $51.96 per person and was $1.58 more than a year ago. The Treasury reported that on November 30, there was $6,786,769,154 of money in circulation—the highest amount since the 1933 bank holiday. The total, however, included cash in the vaults of banks and recent Federal Reserve Board statistics show that the increase in circulation in the last year has been in bank cash more than in individual holdings.

Corn Jump Day's Feature Of Grain Pit

Prices Rise 1⅝ Cents
Export Trade Gains
Supports Wheat Prices

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Lively jumps of corn prices hurried the Chicago market for that grain up 1⅝ cents a bushel today, and helped to sustain wheat values here.

Increasing export trade in United States corn, coupled with shortage of Argentine supplies, was a conspicuous factor. European nations bought fully 500,000 bushels of corn from this country today, and upwards of 500,000 bushels more were disposed of to exporters along the Atlantic Seaboard and the Gulf of Mexico.

Unusual scantiness of domestic receipts of corn were ascribed to widespread holding of supplies on farms and to brisk feeding demand, as well as to United States Government loans tying up vast quantities under seal in rural cribs.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were around the day's top quotations, ½-1⅛ cents above yesterday's finish; December, 51¼@51⅜; May, 53¼@53½; with wheat unchanged to ¼ cent lower; December, 64⅜@64½; May, 67¼@67⅜. Oats ⅛-⅜ up. Rye varying from ⅛ decline to ⅛ advance, and provisions from 2 cents setback to an equal gain.

Commodities Hit by Drop In Sterling

Non-Ferrous Metals, Wool, Rubber Lower; Farm Products Firm

New York, Dec. 9.—The recent leveling-off in the commodity price index, after a long list of commodities had given evidence of starting a sustained rise, can be attributed in large part to the effect of weakness in sterling exchange on dollar prices of commodities with an international market, the Standard Statistics Co. says today.

The non-ferrous metals, which were among the leaders in the upturn this fall, have recently turned weak. Despite tariff protection, prices for these metals move in accord with prices in foreign markets. Rubber and wool are other commodities importantly affected by the sterling exchange rate. Agricultural commodities generally did not share to any great extent in the earlier strength, and by comparison they have recently made a relatively favorable showing.

Because not all commodities reached their lows at the same time, the composite index of commodity prices does not reflect the recovery in many individual lines. The recent less satisfactory showing in commodity markets probably represents a breathing spell in the period of advancing prices which would normally accompany the early part of cyclical recovery in business. The upturn in some lines was remarkably rapid, and a period of consolidation is probably necessary.

Just how long the current stalemate will last, however, depends to a large extent on general business conditions in this country and on the trend of sterling exchange. The impetus for another upward price phase may come from a renewal of the strong upward movement in industrial production early in 1939. At any rate, no substantial advance in prices is looked for during hte next few weeks, and some further weakness may be witnessed before the present period of adjustment ends.

Lady Grenfell, Labrador Doctor's Wife, Dies at 53

Brookline, Mass., Dec. 9 (U.P.)—Lady Anne Grenfell, 53, Illinois-born wife of Sir Wilfred Grenfell, famous surgeon of Labrador, died today after a long illness.

Founder of the Dogteam Tavern in Middlebury, Vt., she spent much of her time in child welfare work at her husband's missions in Labrador. The tavern provided an outlet to summer visitors of goods manufactured at the missions.

Sir Wilfred, who had returned from his annual summer sojourn in the shadow of the North Pole, was with his wife at their Hampton Court Hotel suite when death came.

Daughter of a Civil War colonel of the Confederate forces, she was born Anne Elizabeth MacClanahan, November 11, 1885, in Lake Forest, Ill. It was following her graduation from Bryn Mawr and while touring Europe that she met Dr. Grenfell. They were married November 18, 1909, in Chicago.

Mrs. Hall Is Dead; Wife of Fireman

Mrs. Martha Lewis Hall, 81, wife of Frank Hall, a veteran member of the Washington Fire Department, died Thursday at her residence, 2801 M street northwest, after a brief illness.

Born in Georgetown in 1857, Mrs. Hall was a member of the Queen Esther Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, and was active for more than 60 years in the Mount Zion M. E. Church.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Hall leaves two children by a former marriage, William L. Smith, of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. Marguerite S. Bow, of this city. Funeral services have been set tentatively for 2 p. m. Tuesday in the Mount Zion Church.

Funeral Services Scheduled Today For Paul V. Bunn

Funeral rites for Paul V. Bunn, 67, retired vice president of the Remington Cash Register Co., Ilion, N. Y., who died Thursday in Newark, N. J., will be held at 2:30 p. m. today in Gawler's funeral chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Mr. Bunn, at one time chief clerk of the Civil Service Commission during Theodore Roosevelt's Administration, was stricken on an airplane carrying him to his home from Florida where he had gone for his health.

At the time of his death he was president of the New York Masonic Club. Mr. Bunn had been working for about six years on a biography of Theodore Roosevelt. He retired two years ago as vice president of Remington.

Mr. Bunn leaves a sister, Miss Myrtle Bunn, and a brother, Alexander Bunn, both of this city; a son, Milo B. Bunn, East Orange, N. J.; a daughter, Mrs. Eustace Adams, Miami Beach, Fla., and a sister-in-law, Miss Temple Bailey, author, of this city.

Col. Montgomery Dies in New York

Col. George Montgomery, 71, U. S. Army, retired, died Thursday in New York City.

A native of Ireland, he graduated from West Point in 1890 and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Artillery.

During the World War he served as senior member of a board of officers, which drew up regulations for the shipment of ammunition from the United States to France, and in 1918 was on temporary duty here in the Office of the Chief of Ordnance.

He is survived by two brothers, William R. Montgomery, of Pelham Manor, N. Y., and Robert Montgomery, of Yonkers, N. Y., and a sister, Miss Jennie Montgomery, of New York City.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Joseph Meynell Services Monday

Funeral services for Joseph Meynell, 60, a Department of Justice employe and for five years an usher at the Washington Cathedral, who died Wednesday at his home, 229 Ascot place northeast, will be held at 1:30 p. m. Monday in the Bethlehem Chapel, with the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell officiating.

Mr. Meynell was for more than 20 years a member of the Accounts Division of the Justice Department. A member of the Ushers' Guild of the Cathedral, he had been formerly associated with the Trinity Diocesan Church, where he was at one time superintendent of the Sunday school.

Mr. Meynell leaves his wife, Mrs. Kate B. Meynell, and three daughters, Mrs. Hilda B. Herbert, Mrs. Kathleen M. Fekete and Miss Edith Mary Maynell, all of Washington.

Bernard L. Heflin Funeral Services Set for Monday

Funeral services will be held Monday for Bernard Lee Heflin, 34, of 1326 Orren street northeast, an employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., killed Thursday in a hunting accident. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Heflin, the brother of Cecil R. Heflin, assistant United States attorney for the District, left Washington Thursday for the home of his father, Edgar Heflin, a Broadrun, Va., merchant. His body was found near the home, his gun apparently having discharged accidentally as he climbed a fence.

Besides his wife, Mr. Heflin is survived by his father, mother and seven brothers: Carlton B. Heflin, of Baltimore; Joseph W. Heflin, also an employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. here; Lawson A. Heflin, employed by the Capital Transit Co., and Homer T. Heflin, of this city; Cecil R., Harry L. and Edgar B. Heflin.

Mr. Heflin was a member of the Masonic order.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. at V. L. Speare's funeral home.

ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF TWO-STORY AND CELLAR BRICK DWELLING, SIX ROOMS AND BATH, FURNACE HEAT, NO. 612 LAMONT STREET, N.W., WITH METAL GARAGE IN REAR.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6080, folio 150, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned surviving trustee will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on TUESDAY, THE TWENTIETH DAY OF DECEMBER, 1938, AT FOUR-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 48 in Square 3041, in the subdivision of part of a tract of land known as "Pleasant Plains," made by Leon Tobriner and Michael J. Colbert, Trustees, and others, as per plat recorded in Liber County 24 at folio 29 in the Surveyor's Office of the District of Columbia.

TERMS OF SALE: One-fourth of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one, two and three years, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash at option of purchaser. A deposit of $200.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within thirty days from day of sale, otherwise trustee reserves the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustee may avail himself of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

CARL J. BERGMANN,
Surviving Trustee.

SELLS EXTRA RADIO FOR EXTRA CHRISTMAS CASH

"Connie" Wyche had an extra radio in the house. He wasn't using the radio, but he could use a ten dollar bill. So he ran this ad in The Post's Miscellaneous For Sale column—

RADIO, Stewart Warner, '35 model, in highboy cabinet, will sacrifice for $10. AT. 1073. 1500 Trinidad ave. ne.

Mr. Wyche not only sold the radio but he could have sold four more the same day. Notice that his ad mentioned the object he had to sell, the model and the price. When you advertise anything for sale, give all information, briefly yet specifically. And be sure to advertise in The Post for quick results. Call National 4200.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"What is done in a hurry is seldom done well," says C. J. Tjon-Aman, European contract expert, referring to careless and hasty play of the hand.

"Some players do not allow themselves the necessary time to consider a plan of campaign," he continues, "and they rush through, learning their mistakes only when it is too late.

"Perhaps the most important thing that must be postponed at bridge is the finesse. The immediate finesse is the pitfall of many a declarer.

Put It Off

"Even in cases where you cannot escape a finesse you may be able to improve your chance of making the contract by putting off the finesse as long as possible.

"Some players start drawing adverse trumps immediately only to find themselves at the end of the hand holding losers which could have been ruffed by dummy's trumps. Others seem to have no time to lose in taking a discard that could just as well be made at a later stage of the play to have it ruffed by an adversary who is also out of the suit.

What's the Hurry?

Today's hand illustrates a point taken by Tjon-Aman. Declarer was in such a hurry to take a ruff in dummy that he left himself open to a forcing attack by the defense and was defeated two tricks at his four-heart bid. Had he realized that there was plenty of time in which to take the ruff and first set about establishing an important side suit he would have made the contract with ease.

Here is how he misplayed it: He won the king of clubs with the ace and immediately led his club seven and trumped in dummy. He took three rounds of trumps and then played the ace, king and a low diamond. West won the diamond and led another club, which declarer ruffed with his last trump in order to enter dummy to cash the diamonds. South had to lose the lead to West's ace of spades, and West ran three club tricks, winning five tricks in all to set the contract.

The Right Way

Declarer's error lay in his haste to ruff his losing club and extract the adverse trumps. He must establish the diamond suit to provide spade discards, but he cannot try to first set up the spade king or he will have that valuable entry removed. It is necessary for him to keep two hearts in dummy; one to guard against adverse club leads, the other to act as an entry for the diamonds when they become established.

Declarer's correct play, therefore, is upon winning the ace of clubs to take but two rounds of trumps, one with the ace and one with the queen, leaving one trump outstanding. Next he plays the ace, king and a low diamond to develop that suit. West wins the diamond, but his return lead cannot destroy declarer. If he returns a club dummy ruffs low, draws the last trump and the diamonds provide two spade discards. If West plays the ace and a small spade the king takes, the last trump is drawn with dummy's high trump and again the diamonds will provide discards. With a spade lead declarer makes an overtrick, for he loses only a spade and a diamond.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

WITH the reminder that the field of nominees for the title "Miss Civil Service" will definitely close on January 1—to enable the judges to have 15 days in which to study the records of all entries—we have pleasure in presenting today the picture of Miss Audrey E. Bogue, a Connecticut girl who has worked two years in the Bureau of Internal Revenue here.

Audrey Bogue

Miss Bogue is a junior stenographer, and an efficient one, we hear. True to her New England upbringing, she likes skiing and ice skating. She is one of many nominees whose names were sent to The Post yesterday.

'WAY UP in the high Catoctins, near Thurmont, Md., they're building a camp for the use of Federal employes, a place employes can go in summer and find a cool, mountain environment, or in winter find a lot of fun around the open fireplaces in commodious cabins. The idea is appealing.

The camp is now being built. It is in the general vicinity of the Catoctin Recreational Demonstration Area which is high up the wooded mountains on a good enough road out of Thurmont. The inexpensiveness of sojourns there is a factor.

The exact rates have not yet been determined, but these are expected not to exceed $14 a week for adults and $7 a week for children of employes. This fee includes lodging, meals, medical attention and free participation in all activities. Special week-end rates are expected to be made.

The Welfare and Recreational Association of Public Buildings and Grounds, Inc., has agreed to operate the employes' camp—as this column related some time ago. It will be assisted by the Federal Camp Council.

The latter organization was set up to represent recreational, welfare and employe organizations in promoting Federal recreational camps for employes and their families. Through an approved budget, the Welfare and Recreation Association will equip the camp with mattresses, cooking utensils, dishes and other essential equipment. The camp will have a staff consisting of a director, nurse, activity counselors, dietician, cooks and a handyman.

Campers, if they choose, may participate in a broad program of arts and crafts, dramatics, music, singing, hiking, nature lore, photography, games and swimming.

Matt Huppoch, of the NPS, tells us: "While it is planned to operate the camp for 10 or 12 weeks next summer, it is hoped that sufficient interest will be developed to have an all-year program of week-end camps. Many of the outdoor recreation programs now sponsored by Department recreation associations can be carried on as part of the camp activity program."

The Federal Camp Council will assist in selecting the camp staff, planning the activities program and promoting attendance.

THE National Federation of Federal Employes in a lengthy statement declares itself prepared for a do-or-die fight for extension of the merit system through legislation in the next Congress. It thinks 1939 a critical year for merit, saying: "All competent authorities recognize that if the Federal merit system is not welded solidly into the law of the land by statute, and if it is not further extended materially during the coming year, there is a strong likelihood that further progress may be delayed for many years to come." And the upshot is that the Federation calls on all its resources to push merit in the coming Congress.

O'Shea, bindery operative, 1923 G street northwest, 46 years' service.

Bob Burns Says—

There's a lot of talk these days about wives bein' more thoughtless and extravagant than our mothers were. But half the time, it's the husband's fault for not confiding in his wife like our fathers did.

I had a cousin that went to the city and got married and when he saw that his wife was jest livin' up every cent he could make, he sat down and had a heart to heart talk with her. He told her about how his ma use to make his pants out of his pa's old ones and how she made over old hats and dresses for herself.

And when he got through, his wife burst into tears and says: "Darling, you have made a different woman of me! I'm gonna show you that I can make sacrifices too. I'm gonna wait until the spring sales before I buy my ermine wrap!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Paddy Rejoices

From prying eyes a home should be
A sure retreat and always free.
—Paddy the Beaver.

A light snow had fallen and it semed as if all the great world had been magically turned into a white fairyland. It covered all ugliness so that nowhere was there anything unpleasant to be seen. Things which before the snow fell were unsightly and disagreeable to look at were now either completely buried or transformed into white loveliness.

At the pond of Paddy the Beaver in the Green Forest it was as if Mother Nature had drawn a white curtain over the ice. It lay smooth and spotless. No longer could curious and prying eyes look down through the clear ice to see what was going on below.

Paddy was the first one out that morning to get an aspen stick from the food-pfle for breakfast. When he returned with it to eat the bark he was in fine spirits.

"My dear," said he to Mrs. Paddy, "we may go and come now in the daytime without feeling that we are bing watched. We were safe enough under the ice, but it was unpleasant to know that a hungry enemy was right over us with only the ice between. Now we can have privacy and settle down for the winter."

"I hate being watched even when I know I am perfectly safe," said Mrs. Paddy as she prepared to go out for a breakfast stick. She was soon back and for a while both were too busy gnawing off bark and eating it to do any talking. When both sticks were bare they were taken outside. Mrs. Paddy worked hers into the foundation of the house. Paddy took his over to the dam. It would be handy there in case there should be need of repairs.

"Everything is right over there," he reported on his return. "My dear, I sometimes think that witner is the best part of the year. We have plenty of food to last us until the end of cold weather. We have a fine house, safe and comfortable. We can go and come as we please without anyone being the wiser. We worked hard all the fall, but now we needn't work at all, just eat and sleep and be comfortable. I don't know of anyone better off than we are, or even as well off."

"How about that fellow who likes to call himself our small cousin, although he isn't that really?" said Mrs. Paddy.

"I suppose you mean Jerry Muskrat. Jerry and Mrs. Muskrat live much as we do, it is true. However, we are better off," replied Paddy.

"In what way?" Mrs. Paddy wanted to know.

"Well," replied Paddy, "we are safer, to begin with. Their house isn't built of sticks, as ours is, but of rushes and reeds, and it could be torn open. Then, they have to go dig most of their food when they are hungry. You know they live pretty much on roots of plants that grow in the water. They haven't a lot of food stored up. They may have a little, but they haven't a lot, as we have. They are well fixed, but I wouldn't say that they are as well off as we are."

"How about those people who sleep all winter, or through the coldets part of it, anyway?" asked Mrs. Paddy.

"I had forgotten them," admitted Paddy. "I suppose they are well off. I suppose they would say that they are better off than we are, but I don't agree. They don't even know they are alive. They don't know a thing. What's the good of being alive if you don't know it? We have the pleasure of eating and swimming when we feel like it—and—well, the fun of living. What is more, we have the satisfaction of knowing that what we have and enjoy we got for ourselves by hard work. I don't know of anything better than that."

Paddy said something then. Yes, indeed, he said something then. No one knows better than does Paddy the Beaver the joy of independence gained through honest work.

Mexico's Sale Of Oil to Nazis Arouses U. S.

Concern Shown as $17,000,000 Barter Deal Is Completed

Growing German influence in Mexico, a source of much concern in this country in recent months, yesterday flowered into a $17,000,000 oil-barter deal that brought immediate repercussions here.

Mexico, which last summer expropriated oil properties of American and British companies, announced the sale of the oil for part cash and the remainder in goods, largely from Germany.

State Department officials declined to comment pending receipt of word from the United States Embassy at Mexico City, but it was learned that much attention is being given the matter.

The Department is understood to take the stand that what Mexico does with her oil or other resources, provided they are the property of the Mexican government, is a matter with which the Government has no concern.

However, in view of the two notes already addressed to Mexico insisting upon complete and just compensation for all properties seized from American citizens, disposal of any such properties until effective and adequate compensation is made would be a matter in which the United States is extremely interested.

Department officials, however, are represented as hopeful that the matter will be solved in the same friendly manner as was the question of seizure of agrarian lands, for which Mexico has agreed to pay.

At the same time it was learned that Treasury Department officials are investigating reports that Mexican oil has been "dumped" into this country in violation of the law. No evidence has been developed, it was said, that would call for imposition of an excise tax under the anti-dumping law.

Deal Completed

Mexico City, Dec. 9 (AP).—Mexico completed negotiations today for the sale of $17,000,000 worth of oil in exchange for cash and machinery and supplies, expected to come mostly from Germany.

Germany already has become a heavy seller of various goods here since Mexico expropriated British and American oil companies last March 18. Recently Germany has been invading relatively new fields, selling chemicals, typewriters, office machinery and supplies which she did not market here before.

Representatives of United States business firms here say they have noted increasing competition from Germany and in some cases have virtually lost their own Mexican business.

The oil deal completed today is with W. R. Davis, New York oil man. Mexico earlier this year concluded a transaction with Davis for 10,000,000 barrels of oil on the same plan.

Some Sales Rejected

While President Lazaro Cardenas announced shortly after the March expropriations that Mexico would not sell oil to Fascist nations, he later said that "if the democratic nations won't buy our oil, then we must sell where we can."

Some United States supply firms which had been selling oil machinery, parts and supplies to the Mexican government have been rejecting such orders recently.

Finance Minister Eduard Suarez said today "it is true some American manufacturers have returned our checks for such supplies and even have refused sales for cash."

"Thus," he added, "we have been forced to buy supplies elsewhere."

Suarez said the Davis deal was on a basis of about 40 per cent cash and 60 per cent credits.

Suarez said he understood that Davis would market the oil in various European countries and would not deal with any particular nation.

Since the March expropriations, Mexico has exchanged various cargoes of oil for Japanese beans, has concluded a 10,000,000-barrel cash-and-barter deal with Davis, and has sold oil to an Italian firm. She also has announced a campaign for business in Latin America.

To Seize Sugar Lands

The Italian deal was announced as a cash transaction, but there have been reports the cash is to be turned over directly to Italy for purchase of tank ships, lack of which has been handicapping Mexico in the selling of her oil.

United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels called upon President Cardenas today to say farewell prior to leaving a week from today on a Christmas vacation in Washington and his home in Raleigh, N. C.

It was reported they discussed the Mexican government's plan, announced today, to expropriate and distribute to peasants rich sugar plantations owned by the United Sugar Co., an American concern, in Sinaloa State, near Los Mochis.

It is reported that the Mexican Ambassador to Washington, Francisco Castillo Najera, and Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, have discussed in Washington an agreement to make the expropriated properties eligible for compensation under the claims commission.

6-Year Term Given Women's Attacker

For an attempt to ravish two women here six weeks ago, Ralph H. Haynes, 23, was sentenced by Justice Proctor yesterday to serve 6 to 12 years in prison.

"I hope this man's punishment will serve as a warning that this kind of outrage will not be tolerated in the District," declared Assistant District Attorney Krouse, who prosecuted Haynes. "I am gratified that the court chose to make the three-to-six-year sentences for the two offenses run consecutively."

Haynes, a toymaker for the National Youth Administration, was caught hiding in a hobo jungle 23 hours after the women were attacked. Both identified him.

Britain Set to Reject Japan's 'Closed Door;' Will Bring Pressure to Bear for China's Trade

Special Cable to The Post

London, Dec. 9.—The British government refuses to accept Japan's denunciation of the "open door" principle and will fight against an exclusionist policy in China with all the weapons at its command, it was indicated in authoritative quarters tonight.

The first step toward defense of Britain's rights under the Nine-power Treaty of 1922 was taken today when the government announced its intention of increasing the Board of Trade fund available for the grant of export credits from £50,000,000 to £75,000,000. Some of this money may be used to help British traders take "sanctions" against their Japanese rivals in China.

The government also is studying the possibility of extending export credits to China.

More drastic action is not contemplated at present, it was said. The situation will be watched closely and contacts will be maintained with the United States to study the opportunities for parallel action to protect British and American commerce in the Far East.

Envoy's Recall Cheers China

Shanghai (Saturday), Dec. 10 (U.P.). Government newspapers in Chungking today attached the "greatest importance" to the summoning to Washington of United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and expressed hope the move is preliminary to economic pressure on Japan by the United States.

New Members Sought By Needlework Guild

The First Needlework Guild of Washington yesterday sent out an appeal for young women to join the organization to prepare clothing for the needy. Death has taken many women from the guild, which was founded in 1899 by the mother of President Cleveland, the appeal said.

Headquarters are at the Washington Cathedral. Mrs. W. Elkins Reed is custodian of supplies, with Mrs. George Grove as her associate. Mrs. L. W. Eugster is treasurer and Mrs. Stella A. Wheatley is corresponding secretary.

Japan Plans to Make Puppet States in China Denounce 9-Power Treaty Formally for Her

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Dec. 9.—Actual denunciation of the nine-power treaty preserving the "open door," already pronounced obsolete by the Japanese press, will be made by new Chinese governments established under Japanese protection in the wake of the Japanese army's conquests, it is understood in Tokyo.

This, it is felt here, probably will be the final step in welding Japan, her puppet-state of Manchoukuo, and the Japanese-occupied areas of China into a solid politico-economic unit, putting into effect Japan's new policy of "Asia for the Asiatics."

A full statement of the Japanese view was given yesterday by Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita to the American and British Ambassadors, Joseph C. Grew and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie.

Arita's expositions were said to have contained such phrases as "henceforth, you will be permitted," and "you will not be permitted" in connection with the privileges Western nations may enjoy in conducting commerce in China.

Arita is understood to have laid down two general principles upon which specific questions are to be settled:

The Chinese-Japanese conflict has changed the political situation in China and has virtually dismantled the nine-power pact, and Japan, Manchoukuo and the "new China" have become a new economic bloc, although they do not intend to exclude foreign trade.
